Gifts to BU top $777,000

Bloomsburg University and the BU Foundation raised a total of $777,879 for the 1987 calendar year, according to Anthony Ianiero, director of development.

"Funds of over three-quarter million dollars reflect the hard work of a number of people throughout the year," Ianiero said. "The volunteers are to be congratulated for their efforts, and we are very appreciative of all those who responded to their appeals."

BU President Harry Ausprich noted the 1987 total increased $50,000 over the previous year's total. "It's a tremendous help in support of the academic, cultural and athletic activities that we incorporate in the yearly planning at the university. I personally thank everyone

Couple named fund leaders

Two well-known Bloomsburg University alumni, C. Stuart and Eda Bessie Edwards, Class of 1941, are serving as honorary chairpersons of the 1988 Annual Fund.

Stu, who is dean emeritus of the College of Professional Studies, is a member of the BU Alumni Association Board of Directors (past president) and the BU Foundation. Eda Bessie, who wrote PROFILES OF THE PAST: A LIVING LEGACY, a history of the university from 1839 to 1979, is at work on a supplement to update the history in conjunction with the university's sesquicentennial celebration in 1989.

Both Stu and Eda Bessie are recipients of the Alumni Association's Distinguished Service Award.

REPRESENT BU — For over eight years BU alumni in New Jersey have helped the university admissions program by representing BU at college nights in the state. (See story on page 2.) Attending the training session this past fall were (front) Donato Nieman '74, Lou Maslow '84, Patrick Larkin '83; (seated) Sandra Williams '66, Anno Sarow '79, Joyce Houser '61, Linda Schmicker '76, Diane Danzer Gill '78; (standing) Neison Swarts '63, Dick Lloyd '62 (coordinator and host for the annual training sessions), Mike Blake '83, John James '74, Richard Stout '49, Bernard Donegan '63, and Jim Christy, BU director of admissions. This is just one example of how alumni can get involved in the life of their Alma Mater. For others, turn to pages 20 and 21.

Benefactor is mourned

Bloomsburg University benefactor Marco Mitrani died October 5 at age 90.

Mr. Mitrani and his widow, Louise, were the first recipients of the University Medallion, presented to them in December 1983. Marco and Louise Mitrani Hall in the Francis B. Haas Center for the Arts was named for the couple in November 1985 during a special dedication ceremony and concert by the music department.

Major acoustical and other capital improvements to the auditorium in Haas Center were made possible through gifts from the Mitrani Family Foundation.

School superintendents to be honored at dinner

BU alumni who are past or present school superintendents will be honored at the Awards Dinner-Dance on Alumni Day, April 30. Details of the special weekend, which includes "China Perspective," an interesting series of sessions presented by BU faculty and staff, can be found on pages 31-32.

The reservation form is on page 33. If you are a past or present school superintendent, please note that on the reservation form.

The Classes of 1913, 1918, 1923, 1928, 1933, 1938, and 1948 will hold their reunions on Alumni Weekend. All other classes will hold their reunions on Homecoming, October 22.

The couple for many years have been patrons of the arts, supporting the cultural affairs programs of the university. As charter members of the Community Patrons Program, they have consistently supported the programs provided by the university's music and theatre departments. They recently provided a gift of $75,000 toward the Arts Endowment Fund of the Bloomsburg University Foundation. The fund supports the university's Celebrity Artists Series.

In 1984 they established the $50,000 Marco and Louise Mitrani Scholarship Endowment for scholarship awards to be made annually to recognize students who achieve academic excellence.

During a memorial service at the university, President Harry Ausprich said, "Bloomsburg University lost a great friend and benefactor with the passing of Marco Mitrani. His impact on the community and this university is immeasurable. His legacy leaves us with the knowledge that he cared."

Ausprich announced the university will purchase a

MITRANI

President's message

Last fall an editorial in support of the university's effort to obtain funds for a new library appeared in the Press-Enterprise newspaper. That editorial, reproduced in this issue of THE ALUMNI QUARTERLY, cited the lack of space in Andruss Library and the importance of an adequate library facility to the success of the university's mission. Naturally we are pleased that the editor shares our view and cared enough to write about this critical need.

Since the editorial and, as a result of efforts by university officials, the State System of Higher Education, and local lawmakers, the State House of Representatives has passed a Capital Budget Bill (HB 1743) which includes $11.4 million to build a new library at Bloomsburg. That bill has been sent to the Senate. It is likely that Senate consideration of the Capital Budget Bill will occur later this spring.

We believe that the money included in the capital bill now in the legislature will be sufficient to construct the much-needed facility. However, we know that it will be necessary for us to complement the capital project with support from the private sector to provide the learning technologies that will help us to serve Pennsylvania's citizens into the next century.

Alumni can be of assistance to the university by helping members of the legislature understand the need for a new library and by assisting us in securing supplemental funds from the private sector. If you are willing to help, I hope you will contact Doug Hlppenstiel, the director of alumni affairs, or John Walker, the vice president for institutional advancement, for additional details.

On another topic, I would like to extend my thanks to all alumni who continue to support the university by recommending that talented young people consider Bloomsburg when they make their college choice. Our enrollment remains very strong and is, in fact, the highest in the history of the university. Last year we had more than 5,700 applicants for 1,100 spaces in our freshman class, and the number of applications for 1988 has increased approximately 14 percent over the same period last year.

As we work to achieve the dual goals of access and quality, it has been difficult to have to deny admission to qualified applicants. However, we remain committed to providing high-quality, low-cost educational opportunity to Pennsylvania's young people.

Thank you for your continuing support and for caring about Bloomsburg University.

AUSPRICH

BU signs pact with Taiwan colleges

President Ausprich and the presidents of Millersville and Shippensburg universities traveled to the Republic of China (Taiwan) in November to sign a historic agreement outlining a mutual exchange program between the three state universities and nine teacher colleges on the island nation.

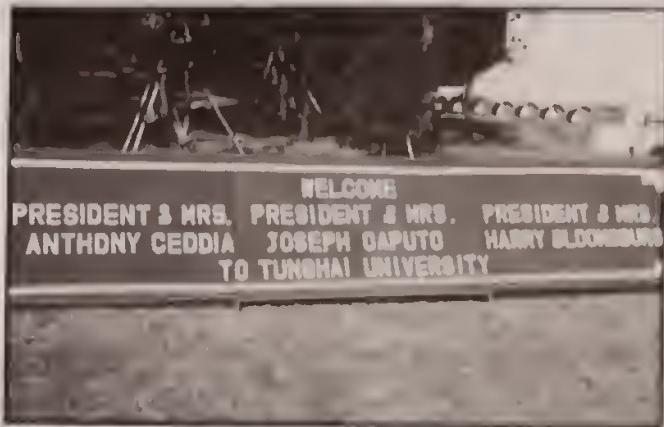

For nearly two years, Ausprich, President Joseph Caputo of Millersville University, and President Anthony Ceddia of Shippensburg University have been working with the Ministry of Education of Taiwan to establish an educational consortium with the teacher colleges in that country. It is the first of its kind between schools of the two countries.

The nine teacher colleges of Taiwan will offer six scholarships to Bloomsburg, Millersville and Shippensburg universities, and the three American universities will provide the same number of scholarships to Taiwanese students. Bloomsburg will provide exchanges in the area of special education, a discipline that has received little attention in Taiwan's teacher education programs. Millersville will offer exchange opportunities in the fields of industrial arts and sciences, and Shippensburg will offer programs in the area of early childhood education and elementary education.

The consortium also encourages teachers from both parties to go to their respective counterparts for short-term research studies. To augment the learning process, libraries in both countries have agreed to exchange catalogs, microfilms, journals, periodicals and other materials. Also, there are plans for seminars, workshops, conferences, tours and cultural activities.

Ceddia, who was designated by his colleagues to lead the delegation, said of the agreement: "This is an exciting opportunity for both our universities and the nine teacher colleges in Taiwan. By forging these links of communication, mutual cooperation and educational opportunities, we are able to share in the bond of higher cultural and political understanding, leading our respective institutions, and those we serve to an awareness that transcends geographical and traditional boundaries."

WELCOME, DR. BLOOMSBURG — When President Ausprich and his colleagues from Millersville and Shippensburg universities arrived at Tunghai University in Taiwan, they were greeted by a large welcoming sign. To his delight and amusement, President Ausprich was welcomed as President

Alumni help to carry the BU message

School pride, meeting people, and spreading the word about BU are the reasons Diane Gill '78 is a student recruiter.

College nights are usually held September through November at high schools or county colleges. Forty to 200 school representatives attend these nights to inform potential students and their parents about each institution.

BU's New Jersey alumni recruitment program began in March 1979 when Gill was asked by her former high school guidance counselor to represent the university at a college night at her high school when an admissions recruiter wasn't able to attend.

Soon after, Richard Lloyd '62, a BU alumni board member, who was organizing alumni chapter meetings in New Jersey, was asked by then-alumni director, Donald Watts '37 to expand the alumni recruitment program.

Personnel from the alumni and admissions offices attended meetings with the alumni recruiters to train them and answer questions.

For the past five years, a training session has been held every September to reacquaint past alumni recruiters with changes taking place at BU and to train new recruiters.

"I believe in what we're doing. We're providing a service to the college that benefits them. I feel it's important to inform people about BU," said Lloyd.

This year, there are 22 college nights in New Jersey being handled solely by volunteer alumni, according to BU Admissions Director James Christy.

Business, specifically accounting and finance, education, special education, math and sciences and communications are the most popular interests of high school students this year, said Christy.

Some questions students frequently ask about the university, Gill and Lloyd pointed out, are required SAT scores, size, cost and location of BU and the courses of study offered.

"Some students ask if they're allowed to have a car on campus and if there are co-ed dorms," said Lloyd.

"We provide an extended arm of the admissions office, which makes the institution special in that alumni never really leave it," said Lloyd.

English grad shares experience

BLOOMSBURG — When Suzan Mazur '69 left Bloomsburg as a budding journalist, she didn't know what the working world held in store for her.

Mazur taught school for three days in her hometown and was terrified. She gave up and went into the world of magazines.

That's when she started using the name Sam.

The magazine was Popular Mechanics and Mazur wrote a regular column about the outdoors. Her writing wasn't a problem, but her male bosses thought her female given name was.

The advertisers and readers wouldn't accept an outdoors column written by a woman, her editors told her. So she changed her name.

Mazur related all of this to a Bloomsburg University journalism class recently when she visited campus as a special alumna.

"It was hilarious to walk into a press conference and have everyone who thought I was a man find out I wasn't," she says. "But it was all in good fun."

She laughs in crisp, clear tones while she tells the story. It's a sophisticated laugh that comes after spending a decade in the inner circles of New York City, where Mazur started working at magazines, then became a fashion model, then returned to journalism.

She works now as a free-lance "media specialist" and lists experiences in international affairs, public affairs, print journalism and television.

She had only one journalism class at Bloomsburg and said she wasn't prepared for her career, but only because "I didn't really see the big picture."

"Teaching was the big thing at the time," she says. "I tried the sciences and that didn't work so I switched my major to English."

Besides, she says, it's more difficult getting into the news media today.

"Back in those days, getting into journalism was a lot different than it is now," she says. "Today you need much more training."

After a squabble with management at Popular Mechanics, Mazur, a tall, striking woman, decided to pursue a real love: the world of fashion.

She began as a fashion writer and soon she was asked to appear in a fashion show.

"On thing led to another and I started modeling at the highest levels," she says.

She shows off her portfolio packed with photographs published in fashion magazines and newspapers. She is clearly proud of the work she's done and the fact that it has led her back, after nearly a decade, to writing.

"Modeling let me meet people I never would have met as Sam Mazur," she says.

Those people include Maria Cuomo, daughter of New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, whom Mazur counts as a close friend; Malcolm Forbes, who she interviewed for a story in Forbes magazine; and former U.S. Congresswoman Bella Abzug from New York, with whom Mazur worked to organize a benefit for battered women.

Mazur believes in women's issues and has been especially shattered over domestic violence in her city.

"It's a terrible thing in America," she said. "I went through a rocky relationship myself and was very embittered and very wounded by the situation."

She said she organized the benefit to come to peace with the situation. She had heard Cuomo was involved in other benefits and asked her to take part.

"We didn't make a whole lot of money, but I hope we raised the public's consciousness," she said.

Mazur has traveled extensively while modeling and while getting back into journalism.

Her resume lists travel to Africa, the Middle East, Europe and South America.

She says she'd like to continue traveling while doing free-lance work for magazines and television.

But who knows?

Mazur says she could have chosen a different career path.

"I could've been working away at Popular Mechanics for the rest of my life."

If she had, she thinks she'd have long ago dropped the name Sam.

involved as it significantly contributes to the university's solid foundation in the very competitive field of higher education," he said.

The total was comprised of $504,330 attributed to the BU Foundation, $203,896 from in-kind gifts and $69,653 from the yield of the Fred Smith Scholarship Fund, Ianiero said. He said that funds directed to support the athletic program amounted to nearly $100,000.

The foundation's alumni drive of $166,660 and Alumni House pledge payments of $4,496 showed an 18 percent increase over 1986, Ianiero said. Additional contributions included $95,100 from foundations, of which $85,000 was donated by the Mitrani Family Foundation; $120,905 from business and corporations, including matching gifts; $21,905 contributed by parents of students for library books, $44,252 from friends of the university, $17,303 from the faculty/staff campaign, a $13,050 bequest, $5,000 from the class of 1987, $4,694 from the Husky Club auction and $12,533 in miscellaneous contributions. In addition, a rare book collection donated to Andrus Library by the Tustin Family was valued at $50,000.

According to Ianiero, major innovations in the 1987 fund raising campaign included a parents fund, a faculty and staff for excellence program, a credit card purchase program, a class gift program and a significant alumni phonathon.

collection of books about the performing arts in Mr. Mitrani's memory.

"We want to acknowledge Marco Mitrani in a way that best depicts his love for our university, with a collection of books in the performing arts that will be used by faculty, students and the community," he said. "We believe these books will play a continuous role in education, a legacy of which Marco Mitrani would be most proud."

During the ceremony, Mrs. Mitrani spoke of how proud she and her husband always were on occasions when they met the student recipients of Mitrani scholarships. She said she considers them people who have a love for life and whose special achievements deserve support and respect.

Speaking to the students present, she said, "You have that ingredient to make a success of your lives, and you can do a lot for the society in which you live."

"My very best to you. Love life. Life is beautiful. There's so much to live for in this great land of America. You can be whatever you choose to be."

J. Daniel Vann III, director of Library Services, said the books for the Mitrani memorial collection will be selected by the library staff. Vann noted the $5,000 donation from the university and the foundation will purchase more than 100 volumes. "It will greatly strengthen our performing arts collection," he said.

Landmark building to house students

The landmark building at East Street and College Hill which once housed Housenick Motor Co. and more recently Independence Ford will be converted into student apartments by Bloomsburg developer Delmar Zeisloft. The project should be completed in time for fall occupancy.

BU is committed to providing equal educational and employment opportunities for all persons without regard to race, color, religion, sex, age, national origin, ancestry, life style, affectional or sexual preference, handicap, Vietnam era status as veterans or union membership. The university is additionally committed to affirmative action and will take positive steps to provide such educational and employment opportunities.

Scenes from Homecoming '87

PARADE MARSHAL — Paul Conard '64, assistant vice president for administration at BU, was grand parade marshal of the Homecoming parade. Riding with him was his wife, Ann.

ALUMNI BAND HAS NEW LOOK — In addition to sounding good, the Alumni Band looked good in the Homecoming parade. For the first time, they wore jackets purchased jointly by the alumni band members and the Alumni Association. Participating alumni included Laurel Parfalt '87, Tom Shaver '72, Torry Guors '77, Joy Franklin '78, Steve Galbreath '68, Chris Shipe '83, Guy and Jeanne DoRose Richards '72, Ted Irwin '70, Becky Seidel '82, Larry Nester '77, Tom Ruhl '78, Lois Robenoid '80, Merty and B.J. Reymer '84, Cindy Hepter '86, Bob Schwanger '76, Richard Schwanger '73, Doug Post '79, Eugeno Weller '74, Janice Kell '74, Neal Grey '72, George Kisslinger '76, Steve Wallace, former director; Sue Leighow '76, Tom and Roxanne Dennis '81, Cleudia Whittaker '78, Tom Smink '83, Sue Davenport '75, Jack Davenport '72, and Greg Bitler '75. The annual alumni picnic will be held at the Great Swamp Church Picnic Grove near Quakertown on June 11.

A miscalculation in the judging procedure led to the wrong winners being announced in the float competition on Homecoming, according to Dr. John J. Trathen, director of student activities and the Kehr Union.

The correct winners were Tau Kappa Epsilon and Alpha Sigma Tau's entry, "Jaws."

The previously announced first-place tie winners, "South Pacific" by Beta Sigma Delta/Alpha Sigma Alpha and "Alice in Wonderland" by Phi Sigma Pi, were declared a tie for second place, Trathen said.

The previously announced third-place winner, "Mash" by Sigma Iota Omega/Phi Iota Chi, has been awarded fourth place.

The monetary awards presented to the original winners were not affected, and Tau Kappa Epsilon and Alpha Sigma Tau divided an additional $250 for first place.

READY FOR HOT TIME — Always ready to show their spirit, the Class of 1962 rode on a fire truck in the Homecoming parade to celebrate their 25th year reunion. The fire truck was borrowed from Knoebels' Grove, Elysburg.

We share the following news with you in abbreviated form. If you would like details about any of the stories, please contact the Alumni Office at 717-389-4058.

Gov. Robert P. Casey recently appointed President Harry Ausprich to the Pennsylvania Humanities Council. He will serve on the 30-member council until January 1991 as one of six gubernatorial appointments.

Allan Bloom, author of the best-selling book, THE CLOSING OF THE AMERICAN MIND, will speak at BU on April 7 as part of the Provost's Lecture Series.

On March 22, Juan Williams, political reporter for The Washington Post and author of the highly acclaimed history of the black struggle, EYES ON THE PRIZE, will speak on "Civil Rights in America."

Bloomsburg Mayor Daniel Bauman has appointed President Ausprich to chair the Bloomsburg Forum, a "progress council" that will oversee the town's Strategic Management Plan.

BU's anti-hazing policy has been approved by the administration following some changes made to an earlier draft of the policy that caused controversy among some students.

Pledges to student groups are not barred from wearing bats or carrying such items as manuals or pillows as long as doing so is not a prerequisite to membership in the organization and as long it is not degrading, uncomfortable, offensive, or embarrassing to the pledges.

BU will aim for an enrollment of between 5,350 and 5,400 full-time undergraduate students for the fall of the 1988-1989 academic year, according to Dr. Betty D. Allamong, provost and vice president for academic affairs.

The university's Sesquicentennial Committee has defined a series of goals and objectives for the 1989 celebration, according to John Walker, vice president for institutional advancement and chairperson of the committee. Subcommittees have been formed to plan events and coordinate activities for the year, he said.

The two-week period from Parents' Weekend, October 14, and Homecoming Weekend, October 28, has been designated as the special sesquicentennial celebration period. All events and activities throughout the year will also reflect the theme.

The office of the provost and vice president for academic affairs is now in Carver Hall, adjacent to the Office of the President.

Dr. John S. Mulka, dean of student development, has taken on special duties for the Office of the President. He will have expanded duties with special events connected with the Celebrity Artists Series, in development efforts in culture and the arts and the faculty and staff for excellence campaign, and in creating new initiatives for cultural affairs. He will also develop an agenda for dealing with student issues and will play a major role in working with student/parent concerns.

Susan Hicks, who has served as executive assistant to the president, is assisting Dr. Allamong in the day-to-day administration of the Office of Academic Affairs. She will coordinate records, handle correspondence, and collect and prepare data for the office.

The university Council of Trustees has designated an area near Baker Center for the Humanities as the Percival R. Roberts III Sculpture Garden.

A bell, designed by sculptor Toshiko Takaezu, will be the first work of art to be placed in the garden. The bell will be cast in bronze.

Roger B. Sanders has resigned as athletic director to expand his teaching responsibilities and concentrate on directing the Huskies' highly successful Division I wrestling program. He served in the post from June 1982 to January 1, 1988.

"Over the past few years, we would be hard pressed to find another program that has made greater advancements or enjoyed more success at our level," said Dr. John S. Mulka, dean of student development. "Our excellent win-loss record aside, Roger's efforts and leadership have helped us administer a program that is respected and is run within the highest standards possible. Our graduation rate among athletes is outstanding, and it will definitely be a tough task to find a successor with the work ethic of Roger Sanders."

Sanders has also been named to the USA Wrestling Board of Directors. The organization, based in Colorado Springs, Colorado, represents nearly one million amateur wrestlers in the United States, of all age levels, and sponsors over 1,200 tournaments a year all across the nation.

Mary Gardner has been named interim athletic director at BU, effective January 1. She has served as associate athletic director for the past one and a half years. Her major responsibilities included overseeing the daily operations of most the Huskies' 18 varsity athletic teams, scheduling of events, budget control, and fundraising to aid the general athletic scholarship program.

"Mary is just the person we want to take over guidance of our program," said Dr. Jerrold Griffis, vice president for student life. "She has been an integral part in helping the athletic department at BU become one of the most recognized and respected programs nationally. We believe stability is the main ingredient to the success of a program, and Mary provides it. She also has a tremendous number of insights that will help us to continue to grow in the right direction."

David Minderhout, professor of anthropology, has been elected chairman of the University Forum, the principal deliberation and information gathering body of the university's new governance structure.

Gail A. Zurick, an elementary school teacher in the Shamokin Area School District, was appointed to the Bloomsburg University Council of Trustees in November 1987, replacing Charles B. Purse of Bloomsburg, who had been appointed in 1986 to fill the unexpired term of the late Elton Hunsinger.

Zurick, who resides in Sunbury, earned her bachelor of arts and bachelor of science degrees from Bloomsburg University in December 1981 and 1985, respectively.

Lorraine Shanoski, assistant professor of elementary education, is the first student to earn a doctoral degree in the cooperative program between Indiana University and Bloomsburg University that was approved in November 1982.

Shanoski's doctor of education degree in elementary education with a concentration in early childhood education was conferred at the May 1987 graduation exercises of IUP. She began taking graduate courses at Bloomsburg during the summer of 1983. After earning the required credits at BU, she was accepted in the doctoral program at IUP in September 1985.

Dr. Margaret Sponseller and Dr. Gilbert R. D. Seiders, faculty emeriti, were recipients of Celebrate Literacy Awards at the fall meeting of the Susquehanna Valley Reading Council.

The awards are presented for outstanding contributions to the field of reading education and is sponsored by the International Reading Association.

Joan M. Auten, associate professor of health, physical education and athletics, retired June 30 with 33 years of experience in the field of education, 19 of which were at Bloomsburg. Auten came to BU in 1968 as an instructor and was promoted to assistant professor in 1971 and to associate professor in 1974. She is a former director of women's co-educational intramural sports.

Emory W. Rarig, Jr., professor of marketing and management and dean emeritus of the College of Business, will retire at the end of the 1987-88 academic year. He came to BU in 1968 as director of the division of business education and is completing 37 years in education, 20 of which are at the university. He was appointed dean of the College of Business in July 1970, and, upon his own request, returned to classroom teaching at the start of the 1985-86 academic year.

Jean Chali, professor of education and director of the reading laboratory at the Graduate School of Education at Harvard University, will be one of four featured speakers at Bloomsburg University's 24th Annual Reading Conference to be held April 28-29 at the Sheraton Danville Inn.

SCHOLARSHIP RECIPIENT — Junior Cheryl Shultz, a secondary education major from Berwick, is once again recipient of a half-tuition scholarship presented by the Columbia Life Insurance Companies of Bloomsburg. She received a full-tuition scholarship in her freshman year and a half-tuition grant in her sophomore year. Presenting the scholarship was Howard Blasch, president of the Columbia Life Insurance Companies.

Schuylkill County alumni organize

SCHUYLKILL GATHERING — BU alumni living in Schuylkill County met for dinner near Pottsville. Attending were June Rowlands Bednar '69 and husband Robert, David Bowen '68, Carol Kishbaugh Bowen '72, James R. Gross '79 and wife Nora, Thomas P. Grow '47 and wife Blanche, Leslie A. Hoy '86, Brenda Grow Kahley '84, Daniel Kemple '40, Catharine Bush Kemple '40, Mary Anne Klemkosky '59, Judge John E. Lavelle '41, Dave Linkhorst '53, Mary Lou Kubic Linkhorst '55, Ellen P. McCormick '78, Jean Klinger Morris '72, Karl Reed '68, William C. Reiley '79, Laurie Driscoll Reiley '79, Virginia Schenk '78, Ronald C. Schock '86, Denise Stockunas '83. Representing the university were Roger Sanders, head wrestling coach; James B. Creasy '57, alumni board member and retired BU faculty member; Molly Kelly and Dickie Paria, Husky Ambassadors; and Doug Hippenstiel '68, director of alumni affairs.

Fraternity suspended after raid

(Editor's Note: We take great satisfaction in sharing good news with you — and there has surely been much to share in the history of our Alma Mater. The world is not a perfect place, however, and sometimes things don't go the way we would wish.

Such was the case on November 19, when a party at the Beta Sigma Delta fraternity house on Lightstreet Road was raided, and a crowd of spectators gathered outside.

As many of you saw or heard, the incident was widely reported throughout the state. What was not reported as widely was a detailed statement subsequently released by the university. We share excerpts of that statement with you because — in the words of President Harry Ausprich — "we feel it is important that our own alumni have a clear understanding of what happened, how the university responded, and why we responded as we did."

Bloomsburg University continues to be very concerned about the problem of alcohol abuse and specifically about underage drinking and attendant behaviors of our students during the incidents on November 19 and 20. We have an alcohol policy that prohibits alcohol on campus and provides sanctions for individuals and groups who serve alcohol to underage persons or charge admission to off-campus parties where alcohol is served.

We also have had an ongoing educational program on alcohol abuse for a number of years. There should not be a student at Bloomsburg University who has any doubt that underage drinking and selling alcohol is against the law. The raid by the state Liquor Control Board and the state police should not have come as a surprise. Neither should it be a surprise that BU students are expected to obey the law and behave responsibly.

Regarding the incidents on November 19, the university believes that students found guilty of charges against them should be dealt with in the same manner as any other citizen. The university does not seek special consideration for students who break the law.

The behavior of some students during the raid on the fraternity house and the conflict between students and police that followed is unconscionable. When police and firemen in the line of duty are subject to injury from objects thrown at them, they must take defensive action to protect themselves and others.

IN A LETTER dated December 14, Beta Sigma Delta president Patrick Barry was notified by Robert Norton, assistant vice president/dean of student life, that "because of the flagrant nature of violating sections one and two of university policies, the number of students arrested, and the adverse effect upon the university," the fraternity's charter will be suspended indefinitely, not to be considered for reinstatement before 1989.

Suspension of the fraternity's charter means that the group may no longer conduct activities in the name of Beta Sigma Delta, it may no longer conduct rushing or pledging or participate in activities with other fraternities or sororities. It may not be represented on the inter-fraternity council, conduct social functions, fund-raising activities, use university facilities or participate in campus intramural programs as a fraternity.

University administrators have met with students, LCB officials, and state and local police and have developed a program to encourage more responsible student behavior.

NSSHSA banquet planned

The National Student Speech, Language and Hearing Association of Bloomsburg University is having its annual banquet on Friday, April 22, 1988 at the Sheraton Danville Inn at 7:00 p.m. You are invited to attend. The price will be $15.00 per person and entertainment will be provided by a D.J. To make reservations please send check or money order to Dr. Ronald Champoux, Department of Communication Disorders and Special Education, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815 by April 15, 1988.

Redman, Rochester scholarships near goals

The Redman Scholarship Fund and the Vernon Rochester Most Courageous Athlete Award are approaching their goals, according to Tom Calder, assistant director of development/athletics.

Calder believes if the 1988 contributions equal those of 1987, both funds will soon reach the totals designated by their originators. This accomplishment, however, will not mean contributions for either award will not be solicited once the original goals have been reached. Both are ongoing projects and funds will be accepted annually for as long as individuals wish to contribute.

The Redman Fund was established during the 1983 Redman Reunion, when BU alumni in attendance made a commitment to establish a permanent football scholarship in memory of Robert B. Redman, former Husky football coach and Hall of Fame inductee. The award is to be presented to an outstanding freshman football recruit once the original goal of $5,000 has been reached.

The Vernon Rochester award is presented during the Husky Club Annual Day of Champions banquet in May of each year. The award is named after former BU football player, Vernon Rochester, who sustained a spinal injury which resulted in a quadriplegic condition. Despite this setback, Vernon is continuing work toward his degree in communications at Bloomsburg. Vernon presents the award to the football player (or players) who displayed the most courage during the previous football season as determined by the football coaching staff and the physical therapist.

The Athletics Department, Development Office and Husky Club continue their efforts to ensure these scholarship funds become self-sustaining. Contributions are welcome and will be credited toward membership in the Husky Club. Please send checks, payable to Vernon Rochester Award or BU Foundation/Redman Scholarship Fund, to the BU Development Office, Carver Hall, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815. Alumni with questions may contact Tom Calder at 717-389-4663.

Association to vote on updating name

The Board of Directors of the Alumni Association has resolved to amend the Association's Articles of Incorporation to reflect the change of name from Alumni Association of Bloomsburg State College to Alumni Association of Bloomsburg University. The proposed Amended Articles of Incorporation will be submitted for vote of the membership at the regular meeting of the Alumni Association members on Alumni Day, Saturday, April 30, 1988, at 7 P.M. at the Caldwell Consistory, Market Square, Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania.

You are notified that the following proposed Articles of Incorporation will be submitted for vote of the membership at the foregoing time and place:

ARTICLE I: The name of the Corporation is Alumni Association of Bloomsburg University. The Corporation was formed as the "Alumni Association of Bloomsburg State College" pursuant to the provisions of Act of Assembly approved May 16, 1923, P.L. 246.

ARTICLE II: The address of the registered office in Pennsylvania shall be: Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA.

ARTICLE III: The purpose for which the Corporation is formed is to promote the cause of education by fostering and maintaining among its members a spirit of cooperation with the Administration, Faculty, and Students of Bloomsburg University.

ARTICLE IV: The term for which the Corporation is to exist shall be perpetual.

ARTICLE V: The number of Directors of the Corporation shall be determined in accordance with the By-Laws as may from time to time be established by the members.

ARTICLE VI: The Corporation is one which does not contemplate pecuniary gain or profit, incidental or otherwise.

ARTICLE VII: The Corporation has no capital stock, but every member shall contribute to its support by payment of fees and/or dues as the Corporation, by its By-Laws, may determine, which fees and dues shall be applied to promoting the purposes for which the Corporation is formed.

A very important phone call will be coming

Soon, you can expect to receive a friendly call from a fellow Bloomsburg University alumnus or student volunteer asking for your support of the Annual Alumni Phonathon.

Your financial support has a far more reaching effect than you might imagine. Contributions to the Annual Fund ensure the continued awarding of scholarships to deserving students, the support of faculty in the establishment of superior curriculums, the acquisition of needed equipment on campus, funding for many alumni-supported activities, and aid to athletics programs.

Last year Bloomsburg University alumni once again broke all records of voluntary support in the number of donors and dollars received.

So please join together, fellow Alumni, and give your caller your careful attention. Better yet, give him/her your telephone pledge. And together we can make 1988 another record-breaking year!

Nominations sought for honorary degrees

Bloomsburg University wishes to recognize the outstanding achievements and contributions of individuals to the institution, to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, to society or to a particular academic discipline by awarding an honorary degree. An honorary degree is an academic award which reflects the mission of Bloomsburg University in the areas of intellectual pursuit, culture and the arts, or public service. Such degrees should be awarded to only those men and women whose life and works exemplify the concepts of excellence, service and integrity.

Recipients of honorary degrees will have made noteworthy contributions to Bloomsburg University, to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or to society in general, and will have demonstrated either meritorious achievement or scholarship in the arts and humanities, science and technology, the social sciences, education, the health profession, commerce, trade or industry.

You are invited to submit the name of an individual you think is meritorious, a nominating statement, and your name as nominator to Betty D. Allamong, Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs, no later than Friday, April 1, 1988. Should you have any further questions regarding either the criteria or the nominating process, please do not hesitate to contact Dr. Allamong.

After nominations have been received, the 11-person Committee for Recommending Honorary Degree Recipients will meet and submit names to the president of the University for his consideration. The president will then select from among those names presented by the committee and forward his recommendation for consideration by the Council of Trustees.

Athletic Hall of Fame seeks pre-1930 stars

The Bloomsburg University Athletic Hall of Fame Committee is seeking nominations for consideration for induction into the hall. This year the committee, in an effort to maintain the high standards and establish a solid tradition, is only accepting nominations of those alumni, student/athletes, coaches and other athletic personnel who were at Bloomsburg prior to 1931.

Nominations of any worthy candidate should be submitted in writing with documentation including athletic accomplishments or contributions at Bloomsburg, and/or after leaving the school, community or professional accomplishments and any other pertinent information to assist the committee's selection process.

All information should be sent immediately to Jim Hollister, Sports Information Director, Waller Administration Building, Bloomsburg, Pa. 17815. Questions can be directed to the Office of Sports Information at 717-389-4413.

Subs big hit in Lehigh Valley

BU ALUMNI living in the Allentown area proved they like Berrigan's subs as much as alumni in the Philadelphia area. After two successful "Berrigan parties" in Philly, we decided to try one in the Lehigh Valley. Over 120 alumni and guests responded to the invitation and had a good time talking to old and new friends over a Berrigan sub. Those in attendance included:

Sharon Ashmar '84, Sam Ashmar, John Azar '71, Mike Azar '80, Bill Azar, Sharon Bleiler '71, Kerry Boll '85, Robyn Bortz '84, Janet Branch '79, Bob Branch, Jim Brown, Caryn Campbell, Jim Campbell '76, Bernie Carwell, Dean Chiodo '86, Doug Clark '75, Margie Clark '74, Frank Cole '80, Donna Debiec '76, Tony Deutsch '82, Anne D'Ignazio '78, Pat Ebert '81, Adele Fagan '79, John Fagan, Joe Faust '86, Sandy Fimiano '75, Maria Frant '86, Rosalie Goldstein '72, Karen Haines '79, Mark Halnes, Doran Hamann '74, Karin Harding '86, Nanette Hartman '86, Steve Hartman '73, Sylvia Havlish '70, Jean Heffeltinger, Ron Heffeltinger, Jeff Hertz '79, Joyce Hertz, Joe Hilgar '75, Sharon Hilgar '75, Bill Hobson '82, Maureen Hobson '82, Jim Hunt, Robert Jones, Priscilla Kayes '70, Bob Kayes, Kerry Kedl '81, Kevin Kinney '87, Kim Kinney '84, Steve Kissler, Coleen Klepenko '80, Janet Knox '84, Karen Martin Kovic '77, Kathy Kowker '83, Richard Kowker '82, Patty Kozicki '76, Boyd Kreglow '86, Cindy Kuhns '80, Carol Lesusky '74, Fran Lesusky '75, Debbie Letterhouse, Randy Letterhouse '82, Susan Lilly '79, Angie Lorenc '79, Paul Malik, Mark Miskowski, Cindy Payonk '80, David Payonk '79, Al Phillips '71, Cheryl Phillips '70, Rosanne Pickett '85, Steve Polzer '78, Ken Pulcini '80, Tony Rosencrance '78, Jeanette Malik '81, Rick Mazich '80, Terry Mazich '80, Kevin McCloskey '81, Valerie McCloskey '83, Rhonda Minnich '74, Scott Minnich '73, Jean Miskowski '81, Peggy Scholl '80, Les Scholl '80, Ruby Schuon '84, Rosalie Schweitzer '82, Gary Scott, Cathy Staub '84, Tammy Sukanick '87, Sue Tansits '76, Stan Tansits '75, Chris Worley '76, Jeanne Wortmann, Sherri Zechman '84, David Zinkler '80, Lisa Zinkler.

Representing the BU Alumni Board were Tom Hughes '76, vice president; Sheri Lippowitsch '81, Dr. James Creasy '57, and Scott Righter '84. Representing the university were Husky Ambassadors Michael Alban, Susan Hanshaw, Mark Foley, and Kevin Cecco.

Another "Berrigan party" will be held on June 12 at the Macungie Memorial Park. Watch your mail for details.

Field hockey team national champs

Another national title for the women's field hockey team, the fourth consecutive winning season and another high national ranking for the football team and multiple individual honors for several of the university's athletes highlighted the fall semester for Bloomsburg's six athletic squads.

COACH JAN HUTCHINSON'S field hockey team was expected to be in a rebuilding year as the club was forced to replace eight starters from the previous year's team, but the young Huskies proved people wrong right from the beginning of the campaign. Wins over several other ranked teams early in the season vaulted Bloomsburg to the top of the NCAA Division III national rankings in late September, and the Huskies never relinquished the spot. A 2-1 loss in the regular-season finale to Bucknell was the only blemish on an otherwise spotless record as the team won 24 of 25 games enroute to its third Pennsylvania Conference title in the last five years and capped the year by winning the NCAA crown, the team's fourth national championship in the last seven years.

The 24 victories set a school record for wins in a season, and a look at the statistics showed why Bloomsburg dominated almost every opponent throughout the season. The Huskies used a huge 835-216 advantage in shots on goal over the opposition and consequently scored 75 goals while allowing only 11 in the 25 contests. Despite an apparent lack of experience in the net with a pair of freshman goalies, Bloomsburg recorded 16 shutouts and allowed two goals in a game only twice during the season.

Individual honors poured in following the outstanding season as six members of the team were named to the All-Pennsylvania Conference team. Seniors Cindy Daeche and Maureen Duffy, junior Cindy Hurst, sophomores Sharon Reilly and Daneen Fero and freshman April Kolar all earned spots on the PC squad after helping the Huskies register victories in all seven regular season conference games as well as both tournament contests. Daeche, Duffy, Reilly and Kolar were later named to the NCAA all-regional squad, and Daeche and Reilly earned the top honors of the season with their inclusion on the Division III All-American first team.

A 35-18 WIN over the University of New Haven in the final game of the season assured the football team of becoming only the fifth team in Bloomsburg history to win at least eight games in a season as second-year head coach Pete Adrian's club finished the 1987 season with an 8-3 mark. The Huskies won six of their final seven games and finished the campaign ranked 14th in the final NCAA Division II national poll.

Wins over Cheyney (14-0), East Stroudsburg (16-3), Kutztown (17-3) and Mansfield (28-17) coupled with losses to West Chester (39-14) and Millersville (33-21) put the Huskies in third place in the Pennsylvania Conference Eastern Division with a 4-2 record. Other wins during the season included triumphs over Shippensburg (24-10), Lock Haven (25-6), Slippery Rock (24-23) and New Haven.

A high powered offense was listed among the national leaders in passing yardage as the Huskies threw for 2,321 yards and 20 touchdowns during the season and outscored the opposition 235-178. In addition, the defense forced 34 turnovers and gave up an average of 16.2 points per game as opposed to the Huskies' average of 21.4.

Senior quarterback Jay DeDea capped a brilliant career in which he set multiple school records including most passing yardage (7,026) and most touchdowns (56) both of which are also Pennsylvania Conference career records. DeDea's outstanding season and career did not go unnoticed as he was one of the eight finalists for the Harlon Hill Trophy given to the top collegiate football player in the nation at the Division II level. He was one of seven Huskies selected to the all-conference team by the PC coaches.

Six of the seven Bloomsburg selections to the all-conference unit were seniors including DeDea, running-back Tom Martin, Linebacker Duane Hettich, tight end John Rockmore, wide receiver Curtis Still and kicker Chris Mingrone. Free safety Derrick Hill, a junior, was the Huskies' other player on the squad.

IT WAS A SEASON OF HIGHS AND LOWS for the soccer team which battled with consistency most of the time and finished with a mark of 8-9-1. The Huskies scored an impressive win over eventual Pennsylvania Conference champion and NCAA tournament participant Lock Haven (1-0) and battled to a tie with perennial power Cheyney (1-1) early in the season and lost a tough 2-1 overtime decision to another national tourney team, East Stroudsburg (2-1) later in the campaign. However, overtime losses to Shippensburg (2-1) and Millersville (3-2) kept the unit from having a shot at the conference's Eastern Division title.

A tough non-conference schedule spelled one difference between a winning and a losing mark as the young team, under fourth-year head coach Steve Goodwin, managed a 6-6 record out of Eastern Division action and a 2-3-1 record in the division.

The Huskies outshot their opposition 237-191 and were shutout just two times in the 18 outings, but their record in overtime games made another difference as they were 0-4-1 when contests went into the extra periods.

Three performers earned recognition for their play during the season by being rewarded with spots on the conference's all-star squad. Midfielders Jerry Crick and Dave Deck, along with back Alfred McKenzie were selected to the team. In addition, Crick and McKenzie were further honored as they were named to the NCAA all-regional team.

THE WOMEN'S TENNIS TEAM recorded its 12th winning fall season in the past 13 years as the Huskies posted a 7-5 mark including a five-match winning streak through the middle of the season. Enroute to the winning record, the team gave coach "Doc" Herbert his 100th career coaching victory during the campaign and placed among the top three teams in the Pennsylvania Conference Championships for the third time in as many years as the Huskies finished behind powerful Clarion and Shippensburg at this year's tournament.

Youth played a large role in the team's success in both dual matches and tournament action. First-year performer Chris Labosky had the unit's best individual record with a 14-1 mark and was the conference champion in the number six singles flight. A freshman duo also accounted for the Huskies' other conference crown as Nancy Bule and Jayne Arlow teamed together to capture the number three doubles title. The pair had the squad's best doubles record as they won 11 of 14 matches.

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY coach Tom Martucci thought his team could have a solid season based on the Huskies' early successes, but even he probably didn't expect the squad to fare as well as it did. The Huskies posted the school's highest-ever finish in the Pennsylvania Conference Championships placing behind only Indiana and Edinboro and missed second place by only one point. In addition, the squad went on to place fifth in the NCAA Eastern Regional behind perennial powers Army, Springfield and Navy along with conference foe Indiana.

During the regular season, the Huskies competed in several invitationals with top finishes coming in the Mansfield and Bloomsburg events, a second place showing at Philadelphia Textile and third at Millerville. Junior Brenda Bisset was the club's top runner throughout the season and will be one of seven performers returning next season. Bisset, along with sophomore Laurie Alexander and freshman Pam Mitchell, earned all-conference honors based on their high finishes at the conference meet. Bisset finished eighth followed by Alexander in 10th and Mitchell in the 14th position.

THIS FALL WAS DEFINITELY one of transition for the men's cross country squad as coach Lanny Conner took over the program at a late date and directed a very small team against a limited schedule. The team got some fine individual finishes from sophomore Tom Kuntzleman and junior Mark Elsasser and turned in its best team showing at the Mansfield invitational where the club was eighth among the 14 teams entered in the race. Kuntzleman and Elsasser placed fifth and sixth, respectively, in that event as well as appearing in the same spots in a tri-meet against East Stroudsburg and Lock Haven. Kuntzleman was the Huskies' first runner across the line in the conference meet in 37th place.

A LOOK BACK at the fall season points to good things in the future for the Huskies as just 20 of the approximately 160 student-athletes were competing in their final years with their respective teams. The relatively young group of athletes made fine showings in many multiple-team events and recorded a 49-22-1 mark, a .688 winning percentage, keeping Bloomsburg's athletic program among the leaders in the Pennsylvania Conference and the area.

Editorial supports new library

(The following editorial appeared in the Press-Enterprise, Bloomsburg.)

Imagine the outcry if this season's Bloomsburg University football team posted numbers like these:

- Last in conference — rushing.
- Second-to-last in conference — passing.
- Third-to-last in conference — defense.

The football program would come under intense inspection. Alumni would demand changes. There would be debate on campus and in town about what could be done to turn things around.

The Huskies, it should be pointed out, appear to be in no danger of the above.

But elsewhere on campus, a critical aspect of university life is saddled with similar bottom-of-the-barrel rankings.

It's the BU library — certainly not as visible or dramatic as the football team, but infinitely more important to the success of the school's mission.

In simple terms, the university long ago outgrew Andruss Library. Here are the stats:

- In square footage, BU ranks 12th out of the 14 state-owned universities with 44,590 square feet, less than a third of the top-ranked library's 150,000 square feet.

• In seating, BU ranks 13th with 452 seats, less than a quarter of the largest university library's 2,000 seats.

- In percentage of students that can be comfortably accommodated at one time, BU ranks dead last, with space for only 7.3 percent of its full-time students.

These statistics, compiled by BU administrators, represent the starting point for a campaign that would have as its goal construction of a new library.

But, much like turning around a losing football program, it will take a lot of time and effort and resources — in other words, a lot of money.

BU is hoping it can convince the state to erect the building. Former BU President James McCormick, now chancellor of the State System of Higher Education, knows the library is needed. If he can help get the message across to the folks who hold the purse strings in the Capitol, the project will be two-thirds home.

But to complete it, to outfit the new library with the learning technology that will serve it into the 21st century, BU officials expect they will need private donations from alumni, from businesses and from friends of the university.

A fund-raising consultant is still working on a financial game plan, so precise details about how much will be needed and how much might be raised are not available. But Anthony Ianiero, BU director of development, tentatively estimates it will require a campaign with a goal of raising $3 million over five years.

No doubt you could put together a great football team and a rousing championship season for a lot less.

But a first-class library is the quiet dynamo of a university and doesn't come cheap. Prospective donors, large and small, should have no trouble recognizing that.

BU should go for it.

What's new with you?

CARMEL SIRIANI '44 of Hop Bottom, Susquehanna County, has announced she will not seek re-election in 1988 to the House of Representatives. Miss Siriani, a teacher before she became a legislator, was elected to the House in 1974 and was re-elected to six more two-year terms in the district which includes Susquehanna, Bradford, Sullivan and Wyoming counties.

In announcing her decision, the Republican legislator said she had served "long enough and maybe even too long."

"People of this commonwealth would be better served if terms of House members were limited to ten years," said the legislator. She said that a ten-year limit is a good idea for the U.S. Congress, too.

She suggested that "there is too much time wasted running back and forth to Harrisburg only to discover there is no substantive legislation scheduled."

To help cure that, Miss Siriani and other legislators have introduced legislation that would condense a session to six months of the year, a rule now followed in New York. Conceding that the bill "will never go anywhere unless the voters themselves push it," she said the idea would save taxpayers money, and it would save time."

Looking back, she singled out the welfare reform bill of 1982 as a landmark event because it increased help to the truly needy while removing physically able welfare recipients from the permanent public assistance rolls.

Miss Sirianni said another notable achievement was the economic recovery of the state after the worst recession in history. "Tight controls over spending, plus tax cuts totalling over $1 billion, have put Pennsylvania back on the right track," she said.

"I am also proud to have helped bring about better tax breaks for farmers and farm families. One of the most satisfying accomplishments was to ensure that local farmers who stood to lose thousands of dollars due to the bankruptcy of a milk processor were fairly compensated."

She said her greatest satisfaction came from aiding constituents who encounter problems with the state's bureaucracy.

A native of Carbondale, Miss Sirianni earned a master's degree at Bucknell University and spent 23 years in education. She last served as assistant to the principal in Mountain View School District.

From 1967 to 1974 she served as administrative assistant to House Speaker Kenneth Lee and then succeeded him as representative when he retired.

ONE WEEKEND in October a group of BU alumni who were freshmen in 1942 enjoyed good food and fellowship at their second mini-reunion. The group gathered for dinner Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Cosgrove, Lehman, Pa., and for Sunday brunch at the Applegate cabin near Lynn.

Attending with their husbands were Morjorie Downing Cosgrove, Lehman, Pa.; Eudora Berle Lyne, Avon, Conn.; Phyllis Schroder Walker, Metuchen, N.J.; Eileen Falvey McGovern, East Lyme, Conn.; Violet Weller Owens, Turbotville, Pa.; Jenn Dickinson Applegate, Monasquan, N.J.; and Mary Schroeder, Easton, Pa.

Because of trimester scheduling during World War II, some members of the group graduated in 1945 and others in 1946. They hope to make this an annual event.

JEAN DICKINSON APPLEGATE '46 of Monasquan, N.J., tells us that after retiring from teaching in 1986 (32 years of service), she volunteered to do research for a Centennial History of Monasquan. In her perusal of old newspapers, she came across the name of Professor Henry Carver, first principal of Bloomsburg Literary Institute for whom Carver Hall is named. After leaving Bloomsburg in 1871, he became principal of Monasquan's new brick school in September 1882. In subsequent issues of newspapers over the next two years, Mrs. Applegate found other references to Professor Carver and his tenure in Monasquan.

"It's exciting to learn that the same man who gave my Alma Mater such a good start was also instrumental in establishing the school system which educated my children and grandchildren," she observed.

BERNARD MONT '54 of Berwick R.D. 3 died December 12 at age 54. He was the owner of Domestic Sales and Services, Nekopec, where he started in 1960. He previously taught in the Kingston school system and was the manager of the PG&W branch office in Nanticoke.

Surviving are his wife, the former Beryl Bevan; a daughter, Susan Seely; a son, Bernard L.; and a sister.

WILLIAM E. NUNN '54 has been administrator of the Upstate Home for Children in Oneonta, N.Y., for 20 years. Sponsored by the American Baptist Churches of New York, the facility is a residential school for mentally and physically handicapped children whose primary disability is mental retardation, but who may also have any number of other afflictions.

Nunn and his wife, Patricia, who has been employed by the school for 19 years, were honored during the annual meeting of the incorporation. They were presented with a watercolor painting of an island off the coast of Maine, one of their favorite vacation areas.

The Upstate Home for Children, which had originally been an orphanage and later a home for emotionally disturbed children, was reopened in 1967 as a residential school for children with special problems.

The facility started with 18 residents and two volunteer teachers. There are now 51 residents, six classrooms and 250 full and part-time employees. The budget has grown from $100,000 to nearly $4 million.

"We needed a director with tremendous Christian commitment, compassion, a willingness to learn, and empathy for children with special problems," said Charles Belden, a member of the board who made the presentation. "We have seen 20 years of demonstration of these qualities by Bill Nunn," he said.

Bill writes: "I never dreamed when I graduated that I would be spending so many years at the helm of a residential facility which has grown from 17 children to over 100 children and adults in several types of residence. We work with the children and adults who are multiply handicapped and in the very severe range and medically fragile."

"My background at Bloomsburg was good, but we did not prepare for this type of work. As I see most programs, even today, the graduates are not realistically prepared for work with this group of children with severe handicapping conditions. I sometimes wonder if college level teachers know this kind of child exists! We are fortunate in being able to attract excellent staff, but even the best need some adjustment to our population. I hope Bloomsburg is doing a good job of training its special education teachers and therapists. In the Class of 1954, there were two of us in special education.

"We desperately need teachers and therapists. The graduates in speech therapy, occupational and physical therapy can almost name their own salaries. Special education teachers are in very short supply. We employ eight and are seeking more right now, and we see daily notices in the newspapers for these teachers in all phases of the educational system."

He reports that they eventually plan to retire to their home in Williamsport. In the meantime, they are doing a lot of traveling "while we can navigate."

K. FRANK DERR '57 died on October 18 from injuries he received when a tractor overturned on him.

BILL HARRELL '57 is trying to do something about the following statistics, which he thinks are ominously significant:

- Forty of the 50 states send larger percentages of their citizens 18 and over to college and university.

- Right now 17 percent of high school graduates in this state, one in six, are qualified to attend college but do not.

- Tuition in the Commonwealth is 17 percent higher than the national average.

Harrell, former associate dean of admissions at Shippensburg University, believes these and other indices of low college participation should be improved. As it is, such negative factors are hampering the state's transition from an industrial economy to one capable of delivering services and high technology in this post-industrial period.

Since his retirement from SU in 1986, Harrell has become director of a $400,000 four-year project to improve the post-secondary "participation rates" among the state's high school graduates. In this endeavor he is working with the Pennsylvania Association of Colleges and Universities in the "Program for an Informed Choice."

Launched in 1986, this program is designed to build bridges between schools of higher education and public and private high schools. Among the goals: to support school districts which are working to improve the attitudes of parents and students toward education; to encourage more high school graduates to go for postsecondary education; to encourage and enable students to remain in college once they've arrived.

Education is the key to "greater job opportunities and personal fulfillment," states a 1984 PACU-sponsored study. Thanks to the efforts of PACU and other agencies, Pennsylvania's rate of post-secondary participation has been going up about one percentage point a year, Harrell says. He adds that the complexities of the new age — toward which Pennsylvania is moving — demand skills, knowledge, mental agility to a degree not expected of earlier generations.

The single most significant factor in student participation rates is parental attitude. Parental attitudes are more important even than financial status because, says Harrell, "Where there is desire, there is a way."

Many parents may not recognize the value and possibilities of higher education for their children, especially if it means deferring a weekly salary or a wage for one or two years. Harrell and PACU hope parents will become more aware of how choices made in the early teens can affect their children's futures.

The schools should begin to talk about college attendance in junior high, by grade seven or eight, says Harrell. Students need to know something about college life, and what high school courses to take in preparation for it.

Even if they intend to take up a craft or skill, these young people may someday want to go into business for themselves. They will have a greater chance for success if they have some college education. There's more to a successful business than the skill itself, Harrell notes.

Much of what he is doing in the "Project for an Informed Choice" involves attitudes, says the director. "We're working to enhance positive attitudes among parents and students."

Parents need to know about the financial aid that's available. High schools and colleges need to cooperate in introducing public school students to the nature of college life and study.

If the state's participation rate were on a par with the national rates, 140,000 more students would be attending college, a 26 percent increase, according to PACU.

Because Pennsylvania is the most rural of all the states, there is a greater need to make college education accessible in all parts of the state. Everywhere, including rural areas, there are students who qualify for college education.

The entire economy of the state would benefit from higher participation rates in post-secondary schools — as much as would the individuals themselves and their families.

Harrell had retired from SU and intended to remain in the area teaching — he is certified to teach in four fields. He was brought into this job with PACU almost by chance; but it was a logical choice, given his years at SU as associate dean of admissions.

The "Project for an Informed Choice" will conclude in 1990, and Harrell thinks by that time PACU will have made an important difference. State agencies such as the Department of Education and the Higher Education Assistance Agency should be ready to take over and continue the emphasis on greater post-secondary participation for all Pennsylvanians.

Harrell's wife, the former MOLLIE HIPPENSTEEL '55, teaches in the Chambersburg Area School District. Their daughter, Heidi, is an elementary education major at Millersville University, and son Tim is studying at Williamsport Community College.

JAMES H. JOY '57, in response to a communication from one of his former teachers, Clinton Hinckel, reports that his personal, professional and military careers have been most rewarding and successful.

"I started my teaching career in Cherry Hill, N.J., as a sixth grade teacher. I was a classroom teacher for four years before becoming director of curriculum development. This challenge gave me the opportunity to plan, develop, and implement summer workshops, instructional materials, and curriculum guides for grades one through eight. Temple University used our Center for graduate students in curriculum technology as a field experience. During this time, I received a Master of Arts degree from Rutgers University (administration/supervision) and Temple University (curriculum technology).

"While in Bloomsburg, I joined the Pa. National Guard and pursued that interest following graduation by joining the N.J. National Guard in 1958. After being promoted to master sergeant in 1960, I applied for OCS and graduated as an honor graduate in May 1961 from the N.J. Military Academy.

"The Maryland State Department of Education recruited me as a staff specialist in 1967. My wife, Sandy, and our two children, James Jr. and Jacqueline, moved to our current residence to begin another career. During my six years with the State Department, I conducted in-service training courses for teachers, and developed and co-ordinated Title III projects in the 23 counties of Maryland. In 1970, I was one of twelve educators in Maryland accepted to participate in a doctoral program at the University of Maryland sponsored by the USOE, where I graduated in May 1973.

"In July 1973, Baltimore County Public Schools offered me a principalship which I accepted and have been employed by them since then. During these fourteen years, I have also served as president of the Baltimore County Elementary School Administrators, Maryland Association of Elementary School Administrators, and am currently president-elect of the Council of Educators, Administrators and Supervisory Organizations of Maryland.

"As a U.S. Army reserve officer, I was promoted to colonel in 1981. In 1983, I was one of ten reserve officers selected to attend the ten-month resident phase of the U.S. Army War College in Carlisle, Pa. In my reserve assignments, I am currently the deputy Inspector general for the Training Doctrine Command at Fort Monroe, Va., and state coordinator for the United States Military Academy admissions process. I have been an active reservist for 35 and a half years."

ANDERSON '72

1972

Currently, he is head of the National Catholic Young Adult Ministry Association as well as a similar post within the Diocese of Harrisburg.

Father Blackwell recently wrote a series of four articles on young adult ministry which will be published soon in PACE (Professional Approaches for Catholic Education), an educational journal. The first article, scheduled for the January issue, deals with cultural settings for young adults. Subsequent topics include sociological, intellectual and spiritual tasks for young adults.

He also is putting the final touches on his first book, which will explain the beliefs and practices of the Catholic Church in a way that is understandable to the young adult. In addition, he publishes a bi-monthly newsletter for young adults in the Harrisburg Diocese.

Another project on Father Blackwell's calendar is the Catholic Educators Future Project. As a member of the coordinating committee, it is his job to help design a symposium for 350 Catholic educators to discuss the future of Catholic education in the United States. The symposium will be held in May 1988 at the University of Dayton.

Returning to York after 10 years, Father Blackwell is surprised by the increased congestion and traffic. He is grateful for the "warm and friendly" reception he has received at his new parish. "Adjusting to parish life after so many years on the college campus will prove to be challenging," he states.

Father Blackwell will organize committees on parish finance and worship and institute programs in leadership development, adult education and Bible study. Another special project will be to establish a group for single young adults.

People of the parish of St. Rose of Lima will find Father Blackwell a soft-spoken man of good counsel, and one with many interests including reading, cooking, writing, calligraphy, tennis, biking and skiing.

Davy Crockett, young Edward Blackwell was hoarding white Necco Wafers and pretending to be a priest.

"I've always wanted to be a priest," he recalls. Today, he is Reverend Edward A. Blackwell Jr., the new assistant pastor of St. Rose of Lima Catholic Church in York.

The second oldest of six children of a Hatboro auto parts dealer dedicated himself early to his vocation. "My father was disappointed that I did not want to go into the auto parts business, but I knew what I wanted to do," he says.

In the early 70s on the campus of Bloomsburg University, most young men were wearing bell-bottom pants, dingo boots and long hair and were protesting the war and the draft. Conservatively dressed Edward Blackwell, however, was a serious student of sociology and history and was very active at the campus Newman Center.

The Newman Center is the home of Catholic Campus Ministry on most college campuses. This is where Father Blackwell discovered his special ministry would be to young adults. Father Bernard Petrina, who was campus minister at that time, was influential in this decision. "It was during my time at college I discovered that the church, of all possible institutions, is the most important in the shaping human society," says Father Blackwell.

His commitment to young adults grew out of the positive experience of the church on the Bloomsburg campus and his desire to share the experience with young adults. "Today's young adults are seeking the same spiritual questions I had to ask myself," he states.

After earning a master's degree in sociology from Mt. St. Mary's Seminary, Father Blackwell's first assignment as a priest was at St. Patrick parish in York, where he worked with young adults at York College and Penn State York Campus, as helped establish the post of diocese director of young adult ministry. From there he went to Holy Trinity parish in Columbia, and later the the campus of Franklin and Marshall College in Lancaster. His most recent assignment was seven years as campus minister and Newman Center director at Millersville University.

It was during these years at Millersville that he became a recognized leader of young adult ministry.

ALLAN CASTERLINE '81 was featured in an article in the Wilkes-Barre Times Leader, written by Stephanie Gutmann. Casterline, 32, is owner of the 93-acre Twin Brook Plantations in Shickshinny, and tends about one million evergreen trees. Excerpts of the article follow:

Casterline walks his fields in a proud, proprietary way, stopping to finger a seedling's needles, telling the visitor what type of plot they have stopped in front of and the stage of growth the trees are in, rattling off scientific information about soil mixtures and types of seed.

It's typical behavior for an absorbed, fussy business owner showing off his product — except that Casterline, blinded in a car accident at 19, has never seen his farm.

He could have chosen the safe, sedentary life of a clinical psychologist. Instead he chose the trees.

Casterline first worked on tree nurseries in high school. While majoring in psychology at Bloomsburg University, he tended a few acres of evergreens on weekends.

After graduation from college, after working for a while in a community mental health center and after the Reagan administration cut funding for social services, he decided to make a career change, to "go pro" in the tree business. When customers kept complimenting him on the exceptional quality of his evergreens, Casterline decided to go into the propagation end, the more demanding, more scientific end of the business.

It's even more complicated by Casterline's handicap. A job which seems quite complicated already — managing a sprawling cash crop and a huge financial investment — becomes positively nightmarish to those of us used to relying on our eyes.

But when vision is lost, other capabilities grow more acute to compensate, to carry the load. For Casterline, it's his memory, he says, his memory of what has been planted where and when: of which methods have been successful, and of the planting lore gleaned from the agricultural books he has had translated into Braille.

Casterline is the central brain, the one with the vision of what this ambitious operation could become.

His wife is the eyes. She supplies the sights which Casterline then interprets. In talking about the farm, Casterline constantly says "we" — as in "we weed" or "we water" — reflecting the way the couple works as a unit.

"There is very little I can't tell about a plant from touch," Casterline says.

He does his share of weeding, fertilizing, planting and even chain-sawing, along with his wife, his brother, mother and aunts and part-time laborers.

But on top of that Casterline oversees.

With the help of a talking computer he stores detailed records of each batch of trees.

"I'm the only one who knows what plants are where in this nursery," Casterline says. "I determine the sequence that things get done in. The symptoms of fertilizer deficiency or overdose, tree dehydration or oversaturation are what I'm primarily responsible for understanding."

"Deb and I can go into the beds," he says. "She knows primarily what I'm looking for, and I try to know what questions to ask."

The Casterlines spend every day "as long as there is daylight" on their land.

But complicated and demanding seems to be the way that Casterline likes things.

"I'm able to go out and do the daily chores, but while I'm doing the mundane tasks, I'm thinking about what's

An Invitation to BU Alumni and Friends...

Last summer a group of Bloomsburg University alumni and friends participated in the first BU theatre trip to Stratford, Ontario. It was a delightful visit in which we spent three nights in Stratford and saw four shows. Free time permitted sight-seeing, shopping, eating in interesting restaurants and doing unusual things like brass-rubbing. Even the weather was perfect.

Based on our experience last year and the recommendations from some participants, we are adding some features to make this year's trip even better.

- AN EXTRA DAY.
- OPTIONAL THEATRE PACKAGES. You may choose the five, four or three-show package. Price range: $209 to $249.
- OPTIONAL SIDE TRIPS AND ACTIVITIES. A number of interesting side trips or activities can be arranged.
- DISCUSSION GROUPS. In addition to the informal post-theatre discussions, we will try to schedule a few group sessions.

In short, the trip promises to be a wonderful experience.

PERFORMANCES

"The Taming of the Shrew" Shakespeare's fantastic comedy of the courtship of Kato the Shrew by Petruchio, who comes to wife it wealthy in Padua. Betrothed she is--and married. But tamad?

"Irma La Douce" The cafes of Paris, the "poulous" and their "mecs"--this is the world of "Irma La Douce". Irma is a member of the world's oldest profession...and she falls in love with a law student! The Piaf-like songs, the ambiance and the Parisian low-life all combine to create an absolute delight.

"Murder in the Cathedral" T.S. Eliot, one of the outstanding poets of the twentieth century, wrote only five plays. "Murder in the Cathedral", which depicts the martyrdom of Thomas Becket at Canterbury Cathedral, is considered his masterpiece.

"The Three Musketeers" Alexandre Dumas' swash-buckling tale of the King's three musketeers, Athos, Porthos, Aramis and their apprentice----friend, the dashing D'Artagnan. The action shifts from the inns of Gascony to the courts of Versailles and England as "one for all and all for one" they battle Cardinal Richelieu and the mysterious Milady to save the honor of France.

"My Fair Lady" Can Professor Higgins transform a Cockney flowergirl into an elegant aristocrat? In this stunning Broadway musical, based on Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," he certainly can and does.

Francis "Doc" Sell '35 of Boyertown is especially proud of his granddaughter, Jennifer Horn, who graduated in May. Early on the morning of July 1, 1983, the birthday of the State System of Higher Education, Jennifer—not yet a high school senior—became the first student admitted to Bloomsburg University. Doc and Jennifer are shown with the 1930 Ford Model A which Doc's parents drove to Bloomsburg back in 1935 for his graduation from what was then Bloomsburg State Teachers College.

A message from President Ausprich

Although I typically use this column to share information with you about campus events, enrollment, construction projects, and university programs, there is a single topic which is of great concern to me and to members of our university community.

Pennsylvania is often cited for the excellent cooperation that exists between the public and private sector in providing higher educational opportunities to our citizens. We are blessed with many fine educational institutions that share this heritage of cooperation. This mutual support must be sustained if Pennsylvania is to continue producing an educated citizenry. I, and my colleagues at other institutions, know that both the private and public sectors need to remain strong. Neither can do it alone.

In recent years, much has been written about the rising costs of higher education and the need to contain costs to keep educational opportunity within the reach of all students and their families. Bloomsburg University and the other State System of Higher Education universities are committed to providing that high-quality, affordable education. Unfortunately, there are several indicators which suggest that the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania does not value higher educational opportunity as much as most other states. Specifically, the per capita contribution to public higher education in Pennsylvania is lower than that of any contiguous northeastern state. In fact, it is lower than all but two of the fifty states. In addition, tuition to attend State System of Higher Education universities, which are Pennsylvania's only state-owned institutions of higher education, is one of the highest among the nation's public universities. Only two states have tuition and basic fees higher than that charged at our public universities.

The Commonwealth has provided us with excellent physical facilities and annually provides an appropriation which funds approximately fifty-four percent of our total operating costs. While we are certainly grateful for this support allowing the State System of Higher Education universities to become strong, multi-purpose universities with diverse programs and excellent faculties, we have received word that the appropriation for 1988-1989 from the Commonwealth will include only a four percent increase. This translates to an increase in our total budget of less than 2.5 percent, which will cover neither increases in fixed costs or inflation. In response to this level of support, the Board of Governors of the State System of Higher Education has enacted a tuition increase of $300 per year, one of the highest increases in tuition assessed in the more than 150 years that these institutions have been serving the Commonwealth.

I am not only concerned about the immediate problem faced by our students and their families in meeting increased costs, but also the message sent throughout the Commonwealth about the value we place on higher education.

Pennsylvania, with the nation's largest rural population and with a history of national leadership that had its birth in the founding of this nation, cannot be satisfied to remain near the bottom of the list of states in support for public higher education. We think the strong commitment the Commonwealth shows for private higher education (ranks second only to New York) should be maintained, but the support for public higher education (47th) should be raised to that level as well.

We need your help in changing attitudes about the importance of public higher education and the level of support required. In future issues of The Alumni Quarterly we will be sharing with you information about the State System of Higher Education, the current levels of support for public higher education in the Commonwealth, and ways in which you can assist in raising the collective consciousness of the Commonwealth to higher education issues.

To learn more about the State System of Higher Education and how you can help, please call or write Hippensiel, director of alumni affairs; John Wall, president for institutional advancement; or to me, your help and support now more than ever.

Open letter from the Board of Governors

For many, in some cases several generations of Pennsylvania's families, the state-owned universities have meant quality and opportunity — an excellent college education in a broad array of fields at an affordable cost. Maintaining that kind of quality for the State System of Higher Education is the primary responsibility of this Board of Governors. It is a serious matter.

But the Board of Governors must balance its concern for quality with a like concern for access to the universities. Each summer, after the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania has determined how much funding will be given to their state-owned universities, the Board struggles with how to make up the resulting deficiency without shattering the dreams of college-bound students.

This is not easy.

For five years, the Board has instructed its presidents to cut services and programs in order to impose only minimal tuition increases. But the multi-million dollar cuts from services in past years cannot be compounded by further reduction without real damage to quality. Universities are labor-intensive, technology-dependent, service-oriented institutions. The demands for these services are ever-increasing.

Now educating over 89,000 students, the state-owned universities have accepted 10,000 additional students since 1983, the founding date for the State System of Higher Education. Over that five-year period, our state appropriation has decreased from 61.5

percent of our Educational and General operating budget to 58.8 percent, the equivalent of $13.5 million for the 1987-1988 fiscal year alone. In the past five years, we have increased tuition only $350, an average of 4.7 percent per year. We have worked to increase external, private support from alumni and others, but it is not enough.

This System of 14 universities has 675 buildings on 4,000 acres. These facilities are valued at almost $1 billion. Costs for capital renewal, renovation, replacement and improvement of the facilities exceed $272 million. Yet, we have had no capital budget monies for building needs, since 1986. Further, we need up-to-date laboratory equipment, current journals, and a well-prepared faculty to guide our students. But a backlog of $26 million in instructional equipment needs exists.

State System students take pride in their universities—their instruction, libraries, laboratories and services. We feel compelled to take all necessary steps to sustain the causes of that pride. Tuition is the student's contribution.

We sincerely hope that this increase for the current academic year can be reduced by supplemental appropriations from the Commonwealth. But we trust that students, parents and all Pennsylvanians who believe in higher education will agree that the quality of their own public universities should not and cannot be sacrificed.

A message from your Alumni president

When we left campus after graduation, our university activities were overshadowed as we pursued our career and set out for our own independence. This meant entering the job market, in addition to new friends, singles living, marriage, children, and a host of other priorities to crowd our lives.

Periodically, we reflect on our friendships and the education we received at Bloomsburg University. The Alumni Quarterly keeps us informed about news at the university and of our classmates four times per year. Yet, it does not provide us with an opportunity to renew old friendships and to make new ones.

To fill the gap, the Alumni Association has been increasing the number of chapter meetings it holds each year.

Our goal is to bring together as many alumni as possible at meetings held in strategic areas. However, any alumni member who wishes to meet with other alumni in their area can do so. Organizing an alumni gathering is just a telephone call away.

Chapter meetings also take any form because their sole purpose is to bring alumni together! You can have a traditional dinner meeting, dessert and beverage meeting, picnic, sub party, pizza party, or covered dish supper. The place can vary from a home to a backyard, fire hall, restaurant, picnic grove, theatre or sports stadium!

For the past two years, we have taken Berrigan's Subs on the road! Yes, subs are actually made fresh by Mike and his staff at the site!

If your group would like to renew friendships with university faculty or staff (current or retired), we can invite those individuals to attend the meeting. We answer any questions you might have about the university and provide interesting door prizes from the University Store, too! The program format is open, and we welcome your suggestions.

In keeping with the spirit of the television commercial, "reach out and touch someone," we want to "reach out and bring alumni together." Contact Doug Hippensiel, director of alumni affairs, today at 717-389-4058 to find out when an alumni meeting is scheduled near you!

BE BLOOMSBURG PROUD and attend the next chapter meeting in your area!

HARRISBURG — Five years old is very young. On the first major anniversary of the State System of Higher Education of Pennsylvania, everyone involved talks about a maturity level that might be more appropriate for an unpolished, but ready-to-fly 18-year-old.

Like the students it brings to its collective doors, the State System has gone through some growing pains, survived a few failures, achieved some successes, set some goals, begun to work collaboratively, outgrown its old wardrobe, and is always short of money.

The birth of the System came after almost a decade of discussion and futile legislative attempts to bring the 14 state-owned colleges under one umbrella. The Pennsylvania General Assembly passed Act 188 in November of 1982, creating the State System of Higher Education, effective July 1, 1983.

Now celebrating its fifth anniversary, the System is running smoothly, despite a central office staff that is stretched thin and despite worries about next year's increase in state allocation. Everyone has mostly good things to say about the State System.

Why the optimism?

In part, it comes out of remembering how things were before 1983. Almost every purchase and proposal had to grind through the approval process of several state government offices. Political influences had a greater impact on individual campuses, exacerbating a natural competitiveness. Local legislators could sponsor bills favoring one institution and, depending on the political climate, could pull some plum out of the partisan pie. Little bits of competition still linger, but, for the most part, those days are gone.

The optimism is also a reflection of the momentum now carrying the individual universities into the 1990s. The quality of students is up, and most of the 14 institutions are enjoying huge jumps in applications and all the students they can handle. Where to put everybody is a serious, but pleasant problem. The total enrollment has increased every year, now standing at 89,500, including 9,512 graduate students. This has occurred despite Pennsylvania's declining number of high school graduates. Non-traditional aged enrollment continues to climb, last fall reaching a total of 16,866 students who were above the age of 24.

During the past five years, most of the universities have stepped up their alumni programming and public relations efforts as a foundation for private fund raising. Together, the 14 institutions have 336,559 alumni, and more than three-fourths of them live in Pennsylvania. Since 1983, all of them have been asked to support their alma mater, and thousands have done so. Some of the universities are beginning to build endowments and, while the amounts are minuscule compared to major universities, they are a sign that administrators, staff, alumni and, in some communities, local residents and business, consider the futures of the universities to be important.

Also during this period, every institution has written its own mission statement and emphasized long-range planning, an activity that generates excitement about the future. Every university has made or is planning curriculum changes. Faculty and management relations are good. There is a sense of progress on the part of campus faculty and administrators.

Part of the good feeling on the 14 campuses is the result of the efforts of the chancellor of the State System of Higher Education, Dr. James H. McCormick, who describes his tenure as "as exciting five years." For McCormick, who has been in the System almost his entire adult life, the 60-hour weeks of the last five years have been "a labor of love."

A graduate of Indiana University of Pennsylvania, McCormick was president of Bloomsburg University when he accepted an interim assignment as chancellor in 1983. The appointment became permanent a year later.

He says the System was a dream of his even before he went to Bloomsburg. When he was a vice president at Shippensburg University, he spent a sabbatical leave examining public higher education systems across the country.

An impression of the study stayed with him when he became chancellor. "I realized that for Pennsylvania's new system to mature, we needed to create a governance system where the very best of human beings could develop, be recognized and encouraged. Also, we needed a system that would have the spirit of some of the best systems around the country in terms of flexibility and autonomy."

McCormick points to evidence of strong governance and to the cooperation of the many people who are helping "make it work." The staff in the central office, he says, are "the very best people I could recruit. I believe I have a top team." He especially is pleased with the balance he has obtained by combining people like himself "who came up through the System," with people "who know Harrisburg."

His vice chancellor for finance and administration, Wayne G. Failor, had worked previously as comptroller for the Department of the Treasury and before that as deputy comptroller for the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation. System and state government knowledge are complemented by two vice chancellors who have worked in other state systems. Edward P. Kelley Jr., vice chancellor for employee and labor relations, previously worked in the Massachusetts and Oregon systems, and Dr. Emily Hannah, vice chancellor for academic affairs, was a college president in the Wisconsin system and a vice chancellor for academic affairs in the Minnesota system.

The State System central office is in the aging, but still impressive, Kunkel Building on Market Street in Harrisburg, where it moved after a few months in the Department of Education building. Gradually, the offices have expanded from one floor to four of the nine-story building. The chancellor hopes that the headquarters eventually can be housed in its own building which can serve as a symbolic governance center for the System.

"But, we must remember that the System is not an office in Harrisburg — the System is all 14 universities," the chancellor emphasizes. "As I visit the campuses, I get a feeling for our strength and I emerge with renewed respect for faculty, administration and support staff. They all believe in what they are doing. And, we are attracting good students with good potential."

He praises the faculty union, the Association for Pennsylvania State Colleges and University Faculties (APSCUF), "which, under the direction of Dr. James H. Tinsman (president), has been working positively with Edward Kelley and other System leaders. Collective bargaining was rough on the first round, but I think we are learning. Just because we are sometimes in an adversarial role at the bargaining sessions doesn't mean that System management and APSCUF can't work together on everything else. I feel we are beginning to trust one another and are developing a positive relationship."

That cooperative effort on behalf of the System, the chancellor says, also extends to the trustees of the individual universities, the statewide alumni council, and the organization of student government leaders.

McCormick believes in involving as many different people with as many different perspectives as possible in helping to build a strong System. One of the early tasks of the System was to write two documents: a brief mission statement, which is a basic declaration of purpose, and a statement of strategic directions, listing short term goals. The group that wrote the first set of strategic directions included faculty, trustees, students, alumni, board members and leaders from the Pennsylvania business community.

"I am pleased with the flexibility built into our strategic direction plan," the chancellor says. "It gives each university a chance to be unique — a chance to develop in a way that makes sense in terms of the region they serve. Recognizing the complexity of the state, we didn't want our universities to be homogenized."

McCormick's collegial philosophy is most evident in his decision to build a management design around an executive council, made up of the 14 presidents, himself and the three vice-chancellors, where all System-wide issues are discussed. That approach to management ensures that each president has an opportunity to be heard before decisions are made.

"I couldn't be more pleased with the way things are going with the executive council. Having been a president in the System, I know that the fact that the 14 presidents have been able to come together as a group and work on System-wide policies is remarkable. Many people believed that this would not be possible."

New relationships with China . . .

(Editor's Note: In conjunction with this year's Alumni Weekend, a special day and a half program, "China Perspective," was presented by members of the Bloomsburg University faculty and staff who have travelled to China. The following article, based on interviews with the presenters, was written by Sandra Smith of Corporate Communication Associates, Bloomsburg. It was written before Dean John Diltrich announced his resignation to accept a post in Texas.)

After hearing Bloomsburg University faculty tell of their marvelous adventures in China, you have to ask, "What's happened to these folks?" Usually they're normal, hard-working, dedicated scholars and administrators, but mention China, and some sort of super electricity clicks on. Eyes light up, they lean forward in their chairs, and words begin to flow. They radiate enthusiasm and vitality. They become modern-day Homer's spinning wondrous tales.

And what's happened to the Chinese in these narratives? Who are these warm, candid, friendly, generous, colorful people? Where are those drab, regimented, inscrutable masses of old news broadcasts?

China has recently opened its doors to the West. But it's not just the country that has opened, it is the Chinese people themselves - and perhaps the minds and hearts of the American visitors as well.

Bloomsburg University and individual faculty members have forged seven independent and separate links with China.

Special education

The most well-known connection is the teacher and student exchange program between Pennsylvania universities at Millersville, Shippensburg and Bloomsburg and nine teachers colleges in the Republic of China. BU President Harry Ausprich formalized the agreement during his November visit to Taiwan.

Bloomsburg's program promotes faculty research, materials exchange and scholarships for student exchanges in special education, a field that has received little attention in Taiwanese teacher education programs.

BU-China project

Howard K. Macauley, dean of the School of Professional Studies, represented Bloomsburg University on the USA-China Teacher Education Consortium tour of China last summer. The consortium of 30 U.S. colleges provides faculty, student and materials exchanges with teacher education institutions in China. BU has four separate agreements: one formal and three letters of intent.

Macauley said that BU has already sent curriculum materials to Shenyang Teachers College, Qinghai Normal University, an experimental middle school and a rural elementary school. A consortium delegation from Qinghai is expected to visit Bloomsburg in May (these visits did take place), and courses in Chinese language are now offered on campus.

Macauley noted, "We're moving ahead slowly. Most of my formal communications with the people in China are in English, but the turn around time is incredible. Sometimes it takes two weeks for a letter to get there and probably another week to translate it. Then they must prepare a response and translate that into English and mail it back. It's not like picking up the phone and calling. It's cumbersome."

Each U.S. consortium college can invite four public school districts to become satellite members of the consortium. Macauley noted that these districts could contact basic education people in China to establish partnerships.

Macauley invited the school districts in Intermediate Unit 16, but only Midd-West in Middlebury has joined so far. The Chinese delegation will visit Midd-West and talk to Superintendent Barry Smith (BU Class of 1964).

Learning about U.S. basic education is urgent since China plans to institute compulsory education in kindergarten through middle school during the 1990s. "We have at least eight or nine Chinese students on campus now, but they came independently," Macauley noted.

Macauley and his wife, Marion, were among the 31 U.S. university faculty members and spouses representing the consortium on the six-week tour of 24 Chinese schools of all types in six Chinese provinces.

"I had studied Eastern philosophy in my graduate program of the history of comparative education, so I was not uninformed about Eastern civilizations, but I never really had a desire to travel to the Far East. Now I'm a convert in terms of Chinese civilization, and it was just fascinating. It was an eye-opening experience for me," he said.

Macauley was particularly impressed with the graciousness of the Chinese. "They really are people-oriented. They're concerned about your feelings. Being there five weeks, when we left, there were tears in their eyes, and they were hugging and kissing us good-bye. It was just an incredible experience."

Schools were closed for the summer when the USA-China delegation visited, but the Chinese brought the students and teachers back and reopened the schools for the visitors. Macauley joked that he could just imagine the response if he asked a local superintendent to bring students and teachers back during the summer for the benefit of visitors.

The Chinese were very solicitous of the U.S. delegates, Macauley said. "They want help. They need help, so they're soliciting that help. But there is also a genuineness there."

The Macauleys spent their limited free time walking, trying to get a better sense of what China was like. "We tried all the food that was given to us. We didn't eat everything, but we tried it. It was total immersion."

Macauley is optimistic about Bloomsburg's participation in the USA-China Teacher Education Consortium. "We're all excited about the possibilities. We haven't gotten any students yet. We haven't sent any faculty yet. There's still so much anticipation."

Women and education

Assistant professor of psychology Ellen Barker also traveled through China with the USA-China Teacher Education Consortium, and she is now writing a handbook for U.S. faculty members going to China.

Barker reminisced about her experience. "Everyday was full. Five hours a day we had classes - Chinese history, education, population, crime, intellectuals, women. In the evenings there were other events. We also spent a lot of time traveling from site to site in our big, modern, air-conditioned Japanese bus."

Hotel accommodations were modern, and the rooms had private baths. Tourism in China is a major source of international currency. While many western-style hotels have been constructed recently, the Chinese have yet to develop modern maintenance programs.

At every stop, the U.S. group drew reporters, camera crews, bands and local dignitaries. "In most places, we were the largest foreign delegation ever to have visited."

Contrary to western stereotypes, the Chinese people are warm, friendly and gracious. "I was particularly impressed with how attractive the people were. There were so many really beautiful women and children - genuinely beautiful. There was no slovenly clothing. Occasionally some was patched or repaired, but it was always neat and clean. It was one of those things you notice by its absence," she said.

Chinese women's brightly colored skirts, blouses and dresses and permed hair reflect the influence of the West during the last five years. Children also sport colorful clothing, while some older Chinese still wear the traditional dark Mao jackets and pants.

Barker also noted the similarity between women's roles in China and the U.S. "In China, you see the same power patterns that you see in the U.S. Women are legally equal, but they still have the lion's share of the housework - and that's without appliances. There are only a few women in top rank positions; many more are in the second rank."

Chinese teachers have similar status to American teachers, but only women can enter Chinese two-year elementary education programs. "They must be able to sing, dance and play two musical instruments," Barker said. "Most Chinese medical doctors are women, but they have about the same prestige as teachers. That's very different from the U.S."

Women keep their own names when they marry, but children take their fathers' names. Women also retire at 55, while men retire at 60.

China's family planning has dramatically influenced the culture, Barker said. "The one child policy works well in the cities, but it is less successful in rural areas. And there are few job concessions for women with children. Younger parents had one child, but some older people had more children. The real winners are women with twins."

Traveling in China is a feast of contrasts. "One minute you're in the 20th century; the next, Medieval times. When I've traveled in Europe, most things were vaguely familiar - the languages were at least Indo-European. The religions and mythologies were the same. But China has a completely different world view. I'm still trying to figure out what it all means."

Business management

Dr. John E. Diltrich, dean of the College of Business, and Charles M. Chapman, chairperson of the marketing and management department, were exhilarated and exhausted after teaching an intensive two-week course for 80 Chinese middle managers at the Anshan Institute of Iron and Steel Technology in August 1987.

Diltrich said he and Chapman were the only foreigners in Anshan, a city of more than two million people in Northern Manchuria. "The Chinese were very curious about us. English is now the second language in China, and even little children would come up to us and say, 'Hello.' They wanted to practice their English."

The participants in the institute were eager to learn, but Diltrich and Chapman had to work doubly hard since there were no texts or materials and only three or four participants knew English. "Our translator was amazing. She kept going hour after hour," Diltrich said. When classes were over, the students would crowd around the professors and ask questions about management, business and life in the U.S.

During the two weeks, the two men attended a dozen formal banquets. "They were hospitable in ways we could never repay," Diltrich noted.

He said the informal agreement with Anshan is not a formal agreement, but more BU business faculty may conduct institutes. "They're hungry for information."

Bloomsburg University has proposed a four-summer, graduate program leading to a master of business administration degree to the Chinese Culture University in Taiwan. Diltrich expects a reply soon.

Courses would be offered to 25 Taiwanese graduate students on the BU campus every other year and by BU faculty on the campus of the Chinese Culture University during alternate summers. The 18,000 student university in Taipei would select the students who would have to meet Bloomsburg's academic standards. "The prospect of visiting the U.S. is very appealing to these students," said Diltrich.

Bloomsburg's College of Business had established an Institute of Comparative and International Management Studies, and Diltrich expects growing interest in research on international business and trade at BU. "Different environments, different values and ideas provide unlimited research possibilities," said Diltrich.

The links with Taiwan and Anshan have given Diltrich new insights. "In China there is enormous excitement about free enterprise - not capitalism - but free enterprise. About four or five years ago, agriculture was turned loose, and farmers are producing much more since they are getting personal gain."

Diltrich said Bloomsburg's College of Business has the faculty and materials to improve international ties.

Urban planning

In March, Dr. John Serff Jr., assistant professor of geography and earth science, joined 290 delegates from nine countries for the first International Conference on Urban Planning and Economics in Beijing. Sponsored by the Urban Economic Society of China, the American Planning Association and the American Institute of Certified Planners, the conference focused on managing urban growth.

"Part of my responsibility here at the university," said Serff, "is with urban regional planning, environmental planning and cultural geography. The Chinese are getting quite interested in good urban planning because their cities are growing so enormously. And while their cities are growing, they're losing agricultural land which they can ill afford to lose."

"I was somewhat limited, because I only got to Beijing. But because I teach cultural geography, I was very familiar with a number of things going on in China - that you would see massive numbers of people on the streets and the bicycles. But you're really never prepared for it until you see it. It exceeds anything you've imagined or seen in film presentations or read about.

... topic of program on Alumni Weekend

"Another impression of Beijing is the massive amount of construction. I've never seen construction anywhere near the scope, and almost all of it is residential. Oddly enough, it looks like each highrise is in the same stage of construction, and then it stops. No work is being done on that highrise at the moment. You see all of this evidence of construction, but the buildings are half finished." Shortages of labor and materials, as well as other factors, delay completion.

Serff also noted, "There's a tremendous amount of the old traditional housing. They refer to it as Quadrangle Housing - attached dwelling units built around a central courtyard. It is almost totally enclosed. There's a little narrow alleyway into the courtyard around which are three, four or five family residences, depending on their size. Another passageway leads to another quadrangle. Originally one was built for a family, and when the family grew, they added on to it. You could have one whole complex that is one family."

"The highrises are designed to replace this type of housing. The only problem is the cities are growing so rapidly that they can't afford to remove the traditional housing while they are building the new construction. So there is a lot of traditional housing still standing and in use."

Serff was unsure whether the highrises are being accepted because, unlike the quadrangle housing, they separate people from their extended families. "I suspect the younger generation is more inclined to move into the new housing rather than the older generations."

While the sizes of individual residences are small, the Chinese do not consider five or six people living in two rooms a difficulty. "I didn't observe it to be of any significant concern to them. Things don't change when they move from the traditional housing into a highrise, for they're still going to have that minimum space situation. Their tradition of extended kin is a degree of evidence that it doesn't really bother them that they're limited in their living space."

The Chinese are trying to control the growth of cities. "Because they have to take good agricultural land out of production to provide for that growth, they can't afford to give people more space."

Serff also noted the Chinese are interested in the automobile. The American and European delegates encouraged the Chinese to keep their bicycles and not expand the use of automobiles quickly. "It would be very nice to say that we gave a second thought to the use of the automobile in (American and European) cities, but it is too late for that now."

Serff also noted the contrasts in China. "The past and present are evident in Beijing. The most obvious are the Forbidden City and other remnants of ancient dynasties." The ancient and modern, the quadrangle housing and the highrises, and dress styles symbolize the diversity in China.

While in Beijing, Serff met with a neighborhood committee. These units are responsible for people's lives when they are not at work. They are responsible for keeping up with the one child family in the neighborhood. They provide senior citizens centers and clinics for minor injuries. "Here's a group of people essentially responsible for the lives of all the people in that neighborhood, which could include a whole series of quadrangle complexes. They would have their own little elementary school and day care within the neighborhood."

The committee members change periodically, but their role is all-encompassing. "For example, if there is someone who is contemplating a second child, the neighborhood committee goes in and convinces them in every way possible, 'No way.'"

Serff expects Bloomsburg's contacts with China to continue. "I hope to return because I certainly didn't see enough."

Food, medicine and just plain fun

Dr. James Parsons, associate professor of biology and allied health sciences, has visited China twice. In 1981, a six-week culinary tour, arranged by the U.S. Department of State, took him to each of the four main cooking regions in China. The tour was limited to 12 people, since that number can be seated at a Chinese dinner table.

Parsons detailed the Chinese cooking styles. "The Northern school or Mandarin cooking reflects the cooking that was done in the Imperial Palace in Beijing. The Southern or Cantonese style is the most subtle. I would equate it with French cooking with fine sauces and delicate flavors. The Western style - Sichuan or Hunan - capitalizes on chili peppers. It's just incendiary hot. It's sort of like Mexican food.

"Then there's the Shanghai school, which is modern, large-city Chinese cooking with a few innovations. It's more flavorful food because they use stronger soy sauce. In a Cantonese restaurant, when a dish comes out, it has a sauce that is basically colorless. In Shanghai, the sauce will be brown because they have a variety of soy sauces. They also gloss almost every dish with chicken fat or oil to make it shiny. They are a little farther north, and they need that extra fat for body heat."

"There's some question that there might be another cooking

area around the city of Fukein. They do a lot of soups and subtle seafood because it's a coastal city. Mongolian cooking of lamb fits into Moslem cooking, and some consider it another cooking area.

"The Chinese have a lost of mystique, or what they might call mythology, about how to compose meals. Everything is based on the Yin and Yang, and they do this with their diet, too. They mesh diet with health. Every city has very large health food restaurants. You tell the waiters what your 'complaints' are, and they will tell you which dishes to order for therapeutic value."

Parsons noted that few institutions such as hospitals or prisons have food service, and patients' families must provide their meals.

He also visited cottage food industries. "I went to a cottage way up in the hills. When I was going up this rice paddy sculpted mountain, it looked like there was all this laundry hanging out. When I got closer, it was tons of noodles hanging out to dry. The people in the cottage made noodles for the whole community."

Parsons noted that Northern China is very noodle based, while Southern China is rice based. "You could easily eat in Northern China for a week and never have rice once. You will also see Chinese breads which you never see in this country. But they are not baked, they're steamed, so when they're done, they're snow white inside and out."

The Chinese rarely use milk or milk products in their foods. The British introduced milk, and custards and baked pastries are occasionally found. Deep fried snails in Won Ton shells with a spicy sauce are appetizers in Northern China.

Parsons explained that the Chinese use some ingredients for texture, rather than flavor. "Birdsnest soup is a texture, shark fin is a texture, mushrooms and fungi are texture foods." Many dishes mix fruits and nuts with meat or poultry.

Parsons noted that Chinese are now well-fed after generations of food shortages, and "I've never met nicer people in my life."

Invitations from medical institutions to lecture on AIDS prompted Parsons' second trip to China. He visited 45 cities in six weeks and found students to be very informed, open and candid.

"The contrasts between what I saw on the first trip and the second were phenomenal. The first time it was immaculately clean. Now the western tradition of littering has caught on, and there are Coke cans everywhere. There's a Holiday Inn or a Sheraton everywhere you go, and it was hard to find quality artwork. The really nice Chinese antiques have been sold and taken to European or American cities to be resold."

Eastern and Western medicine have not fused yet, but Chinese medical schools are trying to combine them. Modern equipment in hospitals may go unused because the communities cannot supply the needed electricity, and the Chinese still rely on herbal pharmacology. "I think that we will learn more about the use of plants in medicine than we ever dreamed possible."

Parsons spent two days in the mountains near Chengdu in Sichuan province with a pediatrician who made house calls in the rural areas. "These are the Barefoot Doctors, and they're like our paramedics." They care for most medical problems, but arrange transportation to major medical centers for patients who need more sophisticated treatment. The Barefoot Doctors provide much-needed medical care, but their pay is equivalent to a street sweeper's.

"I was most impressed with the industriousness of the Chinese. I think we're going to learn a lot from the Chinese about that. They convey so much with so little. We can also learn from their philosophy. The gentleness and general warmth of the people was just unexcelled. And we can learn from the Chinese about priorities of life. You don't see waste there like you do here."

He suggests that Americans could benefit most from Chinese respect for elders. "They have the cohesiveness of the family. There is no such thing as nursing homes or retirement villages. The older people play a very important part in the daily life. They are the head of the family. If they couldn't take care of the children, the younger people could not work. When you walk in the park, you see the grandmother and grandfather with the little baby. They play, rock and hold hands, and it is just a marvelous relationship. You don't see that much in this country."

Parsons cautions that the one child policy may strain the traditional relationships. As the current generation of children matures to adulthood, they will be less able to care for their elderly parents. There will not be the support from a group of children for families to live under one roof.

He advises those who plan to travel outside the major cities of China to be prepared for some inconvenience. The quality of hotel accommodations, transportation, food and beverages varies, but experiencing China more than compensates for any temporary discomfort.

Entrepreneurship

An invitation to the Fourth International Kite Festival took Dr. Joseph P. Vaughan, professor emeritus, to China in March 1987. Vaughan, the owner of the Grand Master Kite Company, also wanted to visit the factory in Tianjin where his kites are manufactured to his specifications. "I wanted to introduce myself to the Chinese I'd been working with for a year."

Vaughan bought the kite business after he retired from HU in 1986. "Grand Master is trademark for a fighter kite that originated in India for contests of skill. They are very maneuverable and have a specially treated line that can cut an opponent's line," he said.

Vaughan sends Mylar and fiberglass to Tianjin where the kites are assembled, painted by hand, and then shipped back to the United States. The factory employs about 20 young women who make various traditional kites, as well as the Grand Master fighter kites.

"It was an interesting look at the workplace, which was very different from what I expected. I thought there would be families in a rural setting, but it was a factory setting."

More than 100,000 people gathered for the international kite festival. "We drove to the salt flats near Weifang for the kite flying competitions. There was one day of international competitions, and three days for contests among the Chinese provinces. I'd never seen anything like it. It was elaborate, colorful and musical."

Although invited to this year's festival in Shandong Province, Vaughan will not attend because he will be participating in a kite festival in Germany.

Taiwanese study at BU

Sixteen students from Taiwan arrived at BU on July 11 and began four weeks of study that could lead to acceptance in BU's master of business administration program.

Property acquisitions approved

The purchase of two Second Street properties by BU has been approved by the Board of Governors for the State System of Higher Education. The properties at 720 and 750 Second Street will be used for academic and administrative purposes.

President Harry Ausprich noted that BU presently has the lowest square feet per student in the SSHE, and these acquisitions will not change that. Funds for the purchases were set aside at the end of the 1986-1987 fiscal year.

Smith scholarships awarded

Thirty-four 1988 graduates of five high schools in nearby counties are recipients of the third group of IUU scholarships that were established in 1985 through the multi-million dollar trust fund of the late Fred G. Smith, a Shenandoah businessman. Thirty-four renewal awards were also made.

The new scholarships, based on academic talent and financial need, range from $600 to $2,500, and total $39,100. The renewal awards range from $500 to $3,000 and total $106,500. The combined awards for the three-year period amount to $246,000.

Former department chair dies

Walter S. Rygief, a member of the Bloomsburg faculty from 1938 to 1968, died on May 22. In the course of his teaching career at Bloomsburg, his shorthand students brought national and international honors to the college.

In recognition of his interest in Bloomsburg alumni, he was designated as an honorary alumnus in 1985.

He is survived by his wife, the former Florence Rojeski, to whom he was married for 60 years.

A scholarship has been established in his memory, and contributions may be sent to the Alumni Office, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815. John W. Thomas '47, one of Mr. Rygief's former students and a long-time friend, noted that "the grateful beneficiaries of his dedication to excellence — the proud thousands of Bloomsburg alumni who knew and appreciated Mr. Rygief — may welcome an opportunity to help to create a substantial scholarship bearing his name which will perpetually benefit Bloomsburg students."

Student newspaper wins award

BU's student newspaper, The Voice, received a first place award in the annual spring competition of the American Scholastic Press Association. The newspaper competed in the top section for colleges with enrollments of more than 2,500 students.

Residence complex started

Construction of a $7.1 million student residence complex on the upper campus is well underway, with completion expected by fall 1989. The six units will each contain two-bedroom apartments with kitchens. Three hundred sixty upperclassmen and graduate students are expected to occupy the apartments.

Old Science Hall being renovated

Extensive renovations to Old Science Hall have begun. The project is expected to be finished by fall 1989. Watch for more details in future issues of The Alumni Quarterly.

Sculpture garden to honor Roberts

A sculpture garden honoring the memory of the late Percival R. "Bob" Roberts, former chairperson of the art department who died in October 1984, will be dedicated during Homecoming Weekend, October 21-23.

A large bronze bell created by ceramicist and sculptor Tashiko Takaizu will be the first piece in the sculpture garden. A ceramics professor at Princeton University for 20 years, Takaizu first met Roberts in 1958.

Center to aid businesses

The College of Business has formally opened a Business and Information Services Center that is designed to help meet the needs of business and industry in the Bloomsburg region.

The center's $40,000 operating budget is funded by the university, private grants, and the Ben Franklin Partnership.

Legislator honored

Rep. Carmel Sirianni '44 (R-Montrose) was among legislative and congressional leaders from the Commonwealth who were cited at the dinner in May for their achievements as alumni of the 14 State System of Higher Education universities. The event was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Council of Alumni Associations, which comprises the alumni associations of the 14 universities.

Yori is acting dean

Robert Yori, chairman of the accounting department, has been appointed acting dean of the College of Business until a permanent selection is made by the summer of 1989.

Yori replaces John E. Dittrich, who recently resigned to accept a similar position at the West Texas State University. Yori, who joined the faculty in 1969, served as acting dean during the 1984-1985 academic year.

LEGISLATIVE DINNER — Attending the dinner to honor graduates of the State System of Higher Education who are legislators or members of Congress were (seated) Mary Anne Klemkosky '59, president of the BU Alumni Association; BU President Harry Ausprich; Rep. Carmel Sirianni '44, R-Montrose; (standing) Rick Howenstein '76, BU's representative to the sponsoring Pennsylvania Council of Alumni Associations; Rep. Ted Stuban, D-Columbia and Montour; and Joseph Nespoli of Berwick, a member of the BU Foundation Board of Directors and former BU trustee.

Longtime wrestling coach dies

Russ Houk, who became nationally and internationally known as a wrestling coach, died June 28 after years of failing health. His successful career spanned 24 years and included two U.S. Olympic teams and three national championships.

While head coach at Bloomsburg for 14 years, he led his teams to three National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics national championships (1960, 1962 and 1965), and was named national "Coach of the Year" three times. His wrestling teams at Bloomsburg amassed a 142-34-4 record. In addition, he served three four-year terms on the U.S. Olympic Wrestling Committee of which he was chairman from 1972 to 1976. He also managed the U.S. Olympic Freestyle wrestling teams at Munich in 1972 and at Montreal in 1976.

He also served as head football coach and athletic director. Many alumni who were members of his wrestling and football teams traveled to Bloomsburg for funeral service.

He is survived by his wife, Carol, and four children.

Associate dean named

Roosevelt Newson Jr., a renowned pianist, has been appointed associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. An artist-teacher and chairman of the piano department at Wilkes College since 1982, Newson began his new position on July 11.

Newson is a graduate of the professional studies program of Juilliard School of Music in New York City. He holds a bachelor of music degree from Southern University in Baton Rouge, La., and both a master of music degree and a doctorate of musical arts from Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore, Md.

Publications director appointed

Jo A. DeMarco, who has served as interim director of publications at BU since last September, has been appointed to the position following a national search. Her duties include coordinating all university publications, producing the admissions publications and university catalogs, and serving as the resource person in the design, writing, editing and printing of publications.

She is a magna cum laude graduate of Saint Joseph's University.

Staff assistant to president named

Gail Derck has been appointed staff assistant to the president, effective July 1. She served as acting assistant director of admissions during the 1987-1988 academic year. Before that, she was associate director of admissions and acting director of admissions at Cedar Crest College in Allentown. She previously held admissions positions at Elizabethtown College.

She earned a bachelor of science degree in human behavior and development from Drexel University in 1974 and a master of education degree in elementary education at West Chester University in 1976.

Orchestra offers Bermuda cruise

The Bloomsburg University-Community Orchestra is offering a Sesquicentennial Celebration Cruise to Bermuda from June 18 to 25, 1989, according to Mark R. Jelinek, conductor of the orchestra.

"We plan to have a very festive cruise to help celebrate the university's 150th anniversary," Jelinek said. "We are making the announcement now in conjunction with the Royal Caribbean Cruise Line as it will be the only deluxe cruise on this line to Bermuda next summer, and reservations are expected to be filled early. We want friends of the orchestra and university and other interested persons to join us on a vacation cruise at a group savings of approximately 12 percent of the cost."

For more information, call Jelinek at (717) 389-4289 or Gail Carson of the Rosenbluth Travel Agency at (215) 893-0893.

Assistant dean named

Patricia M. Boyne, assistant professor in the computer and information systems department, has been named assistant dean of the College of Business for a two-year period beginning with the fall semester of 1988-1989. She will continue to teach on a half-time basis.

Boyne, who joined the faculty in 1976, earned a bachelor of arts degree in mathematics from Ladycliff College in Highland Falls, N.Y., and a master's degree in computer science at Penn State University.

Program accredited

Initial accreditation for the bachelor of arts degree program in social welfare has been granted by the Commission on Accreditation of the Council on Social Work Education. The first degrees in social welfare were awarded to 17 recipients at the May 1988 graduation, and another three will be awarded in August.

Homecoming theme announced

"It's a Small World" has been chosen as the theme for Homecoming 1988 by the CGA Homecoming Committee. They chose the theme to celebrate our country's international heritage.

Homecoming will be the weekend of October 21-22.

V-12 and V-5 reunion held

The 45th reunion of Navy V-12s and Navy V-5s was held at the Sheraton Danville Inn on the weekend of July 15-17.

Attending were Mr. and Mrs. Lee R. Biley, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Brady, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Brandon, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn E. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Guido Ciccarelli, Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Doucette, Mr. and Mrs. John Graff, Mr. and Mrs. Don R. Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Huhn Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Perry Schwartz, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Vincent, Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Webster, and Mr. and Mrs. Biddle A. Whigham.

A special guest was Eleanor Keller. Representing the BU Alumni Association was Mr. and Mrs. Francis "Doc" Sell.

Athletic director named

Mary Gardner, who served as interim athletic director for the past six months, has been selected to fill the post on a permanent basis. She formerly served as associate athletic director for one and a half years.

Before joining athletic administration, she was head coach of the women's swimming and diving team for 12 seasons, and directed the men's squad for one year. Her women's teams posted an overall record of 88-28 in dual-meet action and finished as Pennsylvania Conference runners-up in six consecutive seasons from 1981 through 1986.

GIFT WILL BUY COMPUTER — Larry and Cynthia Johnson Vass, '78 and '80, and Cynthia's mother, Julia K. Johnson, have donated $800 which will be used to purchase a computer for the BU forensics program. Accepting the gift was Harry C. Strine III (second from right), associate professor of communication studies and director of forensics.

A graduate of East Stroudsburg University, she joined the BU faculty in 1974.

NSSHLA issues invitation

The National Student Speech, Hearing and Language Association invites alumni and their families to an open house at the Speech, Language and Hearing Clinic after the parade on Homecoming Day, October 22.

Esther M. Tracey, president, and Ronald R. Champoux, advisor, urge alumni to "come and see our renovated clinic in Navy Hall. Come and greet classmates whom you may not have seen in years. Come and meet colleagues from other classes. Come and renew your acquaintances with faculty members and meet new faculty members. Come and enjoy Homecoming."

No reservations are necessary.

Bloomsburg memorabilia sought

Any alumni who would like to donate or loan Bloomsburg "artifacts" or other memorabilia to the university for its sesquicentennial celebration in 1989 should contact John L. Walker, vice president for institutional advancement, or Doug Hippenspiel, director of alumni affairs, at (717) 389-4524 or 389-4058.

Bloomsburg University is committed to providing equal educational and employment opportunities for all persons without regard to race, color, religion, sex, age, national origin, ancestry, life style, affectional or sexual preference, handicap, Vietnam era status as veterans, or union membership. The university is additionally committed to affirmative action and will take positive steps to provide such educational and employment opportunities.

(Editor's Note: The following account was written by Mary Anne Klemkosky '59, president of the BU Alumni Association.)

On June 10, a group of 24 Bloomsburg alumni and friends set sail on a "cruise to nowhere." Yes, nowhere! Our destination was 24 hours out to sea and return!

We boarded the S.S. Galileo at Penn's Landing in Philadelphia at 1 p.m. By 1:30 p.m., many of us were unpacked, swim suited, and in line for a festive luncheon buffet followed by browsing the ship to become familiar with its facilities. We found two swimming pools, many lounge chairs, gift shop, casino, sauna/massage, gym, health club, chapel, cinema, restaurant, Fantasy Lounge, Disco Lounge, Marine Bar, and Olympia Ballroom.

At 3 p.m. passengers gathered at the sides of the ship as we left Penn's Landing. A tire boat escorted us out of the harbor spraying jets of water. Our departure heralded a weekend of calm seas, sun, relaxation and fun!

The SEASCAPE provided passengers with a list of daily activities — Friday's choices included piano bar, disco music, regular dancing music, singles get-together, horse racing, showband, bingo and movies. After dinner each evening, passengers were treated to a singing/dancing show as well as a show of magic and illusions. Saturday's choices included fitness class/aerobics, library provided books/games, trapshooting, deck sports tournaments, trivia game, walk-a-thon on captain's deck, bingo, ballroom dancing lessons, crazy hour (Miss Galileo, Sexy Legs Contest and pool games), golf putting, darts, horse racing, movies and piano favorites. Of course, for those of use who wanted to relax, there was a day in the sun at the pool or walking the deck in the evening, feeling the ocean breeze and enjoying the starlit sky.

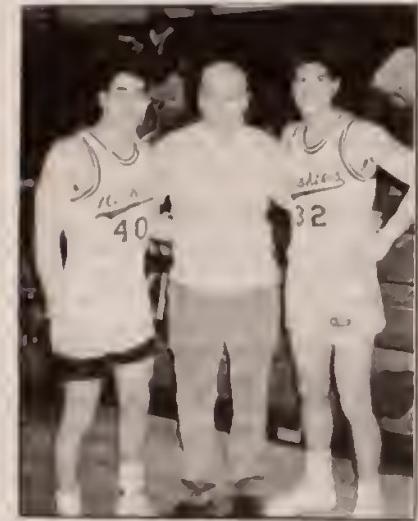

Hall of Fame inductees listed

Eight individuals have been selected for induction to the Bloomsburg University Athletic Hall of Fame during the Hall of Fame football game on Saturday, September 24. The inductees will be honored at a banquet on Friday evening, September 23, at the Danville Sheraton Inn.

This year's inductees are Elsed H. Jones '30, Frank J. Golder '31, Francis "Doc" Sell '35, the late John Sircovics '39, Thomas M. Donan Jr. '49, Jan A. Prosseda '66, and the late Eleanor Wray, former BU athletic administrator, teacher, and coach.

Their families and friends are cordially invited to join them at the banquet on Friday evening and at the football game on Saturday. For information about reservations, please call the Alumni Office at (717) 389-4058.

ALUMNI BASKETBALL GAME — Participating in the annual alumni basketball game were (kneeling) Randy Colone, Doug Greenholt, Shane Planutis, Dean Colone, and Richard Yanni; (standing) Joe Vezendy, George Hamilton, Terry Conrad, Tony DaRe, Dave Ogden, Les Alston, Jon Bardsley and Doc Herbert. On hand to watch sons Dean and Randy play was dad, Joseph "Bellis" Colone '54, a former standout cage star himself.

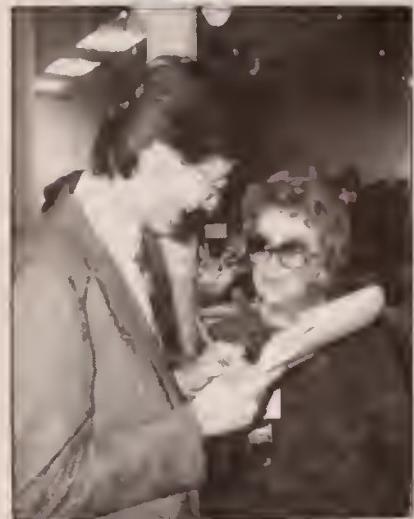

SORORITY PICNIC — The alumni sisters of Lambda Alpha Mu held their family picnic on June 18 at the Fenstemaker Alumni House at BU. Thirteen sisters attended, along with husbands, boyfriends and children, for a total of 31. Pam Hartzell was in charge of making the arrangements. Present were (sitting) Judy Collier-Fasnacht, Ann Kapuschinsky-Rostovich, Jeanne Shuey-Skelding, Sharon Gettel, Nancy Kushnerick, Elaine Pelletier-Slusser, (standing) Darlene Clarke-Amsler, Linda Harmon-Page, Tina Wessel D'Angelo, Brenda Myers-Schoffstall, Mary Wooster-Torsell, Pam "Pal" Hartzell, Becky Koppenhaver-Kline. The sisters' annual fall luncheon will be held on November 19 at the Hotel Hershey.

Mitrani bequest provides $500,000

A second $500,000 donation for academic scholarships at Bloomsburg University has been announced by Louise Mitrani, wife of the late Bloomsburg industrialist and philanthropist Marco Mitrani.

The gift boosts the Marco and Louise Mitrani Scholarship Fund, established with a initial donation of $500,000 from the Mitrani Family Foundation in 1985, to $1 million, according to Anthony Iamiero, director of development at BU. The fund is used annually for scholarship grants primarily on merit and potential of the prospective recipient, with some consideration of financial need.

"Since the university used the initial gift so well to establish scholarships for deserving students, my late husband's will provided for an additional gift to continue to provide assistance to the young people who are destined to serve society," Mrs. Mitrani said. "For so many years, Marco and I enjoyed varied activities at the university, and I still enjoy my current associations with the university community. It's a beautiful university with a fine faculty and students. It gives me great pleasure to follow through with this bequest."

Since the Mitrani scholarships were established, 38 students have received grants to supplement their educational expenses. Approximately 14 more grants from the fund will be awarded to freshmen for the 1988-1989 academic year.

Magee family donates home

The Magee Mansion, located at 700 West Main Street in Bloomsburg, has been donated to the university by the family of the late industrialist Harry L. Magee and his wife, the late Alice C. Hartman Magee.

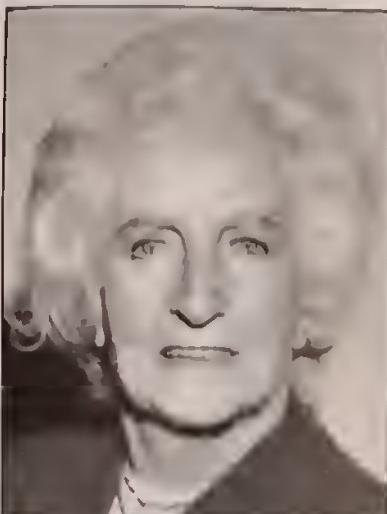

Acceptance of the gift has been approved by the Board of Governors of the State System of Higher Education, upon recommendation by the BU Council of Trustees.

"This represents a very special and very important gift from the community, a very positive statement about our institution," President Harry Ausprich commented. "With the space problems we face, we believe this facility will serve the educational mission of the university."

Although no definite plans have been made, university officials have proposed using the 8,320 square feet of space as an adult learning center, university meeting site, classrooms, or guest quarters for visiting dignitaries.

The fieldstone-faced house, considered "revolutionary" when designed in 1946 by Philadelphia architect Paul Dentremont, features an expansive central courtyard and patio, a spiral staircase leading to an upstairs den, black-marbled fireplaces, and a 1,600-square foot indoor swimming pool. In 1947 it was featured in a Life magazine photo layout.

James Magee, president of Magee Industrial Enterprises and co-trustee of the Magee Foundation, and his sister, Joanne Magee Katernan, offered the house to the university following the death of their mother last October. They agreed the university could best maintain the stylishly designed house which is adjacent to the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds. One concern of the family is that the excellent condition of the property be maintained.

Louise Mitrani

Mitrani gives $75,000 to Arts Endowment

A gift of $75,000 to the Bloomsburg University Foundation for the Arts Endowment Fund has been received from Louise Mitrani, wife of the late industrialist and philanthropist Marco Mitrani.

In announcing the gift, Mrs. Mitrani said, "For many years my husband and I enjoyed the fine performances of talented professionals who appeared on stage at the university. I still enjoy being in the audience whenever possible. I hope this gift will be used by the Community Arts Council to continue the Celebrity Artist Series for the enjoyment of the entire region."

In 1985, the Mitraniis provided substantial funds for major acoustical improvements to the main auditorium of the Haas Center for the Arts. At that time, the BU Council of Trustees named the auditorium "Marco and Louise Mitrani Hall."

Students pledge $250,000 for library

Students of the university have pledged $250,000 over the next five years toward a major comprehensive fund-raising campaign to begin in January in conjunction with the Sesquicentennial Celebration of the university.

"The gift is a challenge to the alumni and friends of the university to join in and support this vital campaign during the 150th anniversary of our founding," said Edward Gobea III '88, last year's president of the Community Government Association. "We want to begin the celebration in a big way, and we believe this contribution will help to do just that."

Anthony Iamiero, director of development, said the gift has been earmarked for the Library Enhancement Fund, one of the priorities established for the drive.

President Harry Ausprich said the generous gift "should provide an inspiration to everyone planning to take part in the university's celebration."

Erma M. Hefferan

Gift provides history scholarships

A generous gift from Miss Erma M. Hefferan will provide two annual $500 scholarships to history majors at Bloomsburg University who aspire to teach in junior or senior high school. Income from the invested gift will also provide stipends to history majors who take advantage of opportunities to study abroad.

Miss Hefferan, a resident of Montrose, said the gift is in appreciation of the "kind, considerate and competent professors in 1927-1929 who taught the group of degree students in basic education courses. Miss Hefferan was enrolled for these two years and then transferred to Penn State, where she received her degree in 1931.

Miss Hefferan retired in 1974 after a teaching career at Montrose Area High School which spanned 41 years (without a break). A member of the social studies department, she taught classes in ancient, medieval and American history and was an active member of the Pennsylvania Council of Social Studies. She advised the Junior Historians (sponsored by the Pa. Historical Commission) and took them to state conventions and on field trips. She also encouraged research and writing on local history. She was the social studies person on a school evaluation team in a New York State school and was chairman of the social studies department for her own school evaluation.

Since retirement, she has traveled extensively, has researched and written the history of her church, has completed and maintained two family genealogical records, has served on the board of directors of the Susquehanna County Historical Society and Free Library Association, has been active in Alpha Zeta chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, and has presented numerous programs on gardening, the environment and travel. In addition to writing and gardening, she also enjoys crafts like tote painting and needle crafts.

Phonathon raises over $110,000

The Bloomsburg University Foundation Phonathon in March and April raised over $110,000 in pledges, according to Sue Mitchell Hellewig '82, assistant director of development.

Under the direction of supervisors Sue Bodman, Joe DeMelfi, Doug McClintock '73, Shelley Sheny '89 and Done Hasselman '89, student callers contacted over 7,200 alumni. More than 3,200 alumni donated generously; another 1,000 alumni are considering a gift. The average pledge was about $35.

While BU alumni are responsible for this success, there were over 350 students working on the phones who also deserve a great deal of credit, according to Hellewig. Ten sororities, six fraternities, and three other campus organizations, along with 100 students in mass communications and salesmanship courses, devoted an evening of their time to this fundraising event.

"We are most grateful to all who participated," said Hellewig. "Results of this caliber are only possible when we have the support of both our students and alumni. The phonathon offers students the opportunity to interact with alumni, and gives alumni the chance to communicate with the university on a personal level each year. From the feedback we received, the phonathon experience was a plus for everyone."

The Alumni Annual Fund goal for 1988 is $200,000. To date, over $120,000 has been received.

Alumni involvement: The Key to Success

The real success of a university is measured in a large part by the participation of its alumni, both in the school's activities and in their financial support.

Since the Alumni Association was chartered in 1933, much time has been devoted to supporting the association and its activities. At the same time, the university has attempted to raise considerable amounts of money over the years to support academic excellence.

"We have a strong nucleus of alumni who are active and have been active for many years," said President Harry Ausprich. "But there are over 31,000 Bloomsburg alumni. In order for Bloomsburg to maintain its present status and programs, and continue to grow, we need the support of ALL our alumni. This fall, alumni who have given to the 1988 Annual Fund will receive a letter asking for their support. As you consider your gift, please remember the impact your support will have on both the students attending BU and the University as a whole."

Your gift will enroll you in the Alumni Association as a member in good standing. Gifts of $35 or more may be designated for a special purpose. Gifts of $100 or more will make you a member of one of the following major donor clubs: Centennial Club, $100; Founders' Club, $149; Long Porch Society, $500; Maroon and Gold Club, $1,000; Carver Tower Associates, $5,000; or President's Club, $10,000.

Brochures available

Three brochures, "Gathering Information for Drafting a Will," "Will Your Wishes Be Followed?" and "15 Ways to Plan Your Charitable Gift," are available from the Bloomsburg University Development Office, Carver Hall, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815.

Five honored during Alumni Weekend

Five individuals were honored by the Bloomsburg University Alumni Association during the Awards Dinner-Dance on Alumni Weekend.

Distinguished Service Awards were presented to Harriet Kocher '39 and John W. Thomas '47, while A. William Kelly '71 was designated as "Young Alumnus of the Year." Named as Honorary Alumni were Patrick Haggerty and Howard E. McKinnon.

Harriet Kocher '39

Ms. Kocher's career has taken her from a clerical position at the New Colonial Hotel in Washington, D.C., to director of marketing and sales support in the Western Region of Quality International, with hotel-motel franchise headquarters in Silver Spring, Md. Her region includes California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Arizona, Utah, Idaho, Montana, Alaska, Hawaii, Wyoming and the Canadian provinces of British Columbia and Alberta.

As her career advanced, she also found time to provide leadership for the Washington, D.C. chapter of Bloomsburg alumni for many years and served on the advisory board to the University's College of Business from 1981 to 1986.

A member of the well-known Kocher family of Espy, Ms. Kocher's first association with BU was as a grade school student in the Training School of what was then Bloomsburg State Normal School. After high school, she returned to BSTC to earn a degree in business education. (Five brothers and sisters are also Bloomsburg alumni: Dorothy Kocher Pugh, Bernice Kocher Thomas, Frank Kocher Jr., Ernest Kocher and George Kocher.)

After teaching in Souderton and Glenolden, Pa., and Milford, Delaware, Ms. Kocher decided to pursue a career in the hospitality industry. Her first experience in hotel-motel administration was as secretary, bookkeeper, dining room supervisor, assistant manager, front office, at the New Colonial Hotel and the Statler-Hilton (now Capitol Hilton Hotel) in Washington, D.C. Next she served as a bookkeeper and relief manager at five inns operated by Bergree Hotels in Maryland, Virginia and Florida. She then gained experience as general manager of the Park Arlington Hotel (now Quality Hotel and Conference Center) in Arlington, Va.; Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge in Wheaton, Md.; and Quality Inn, Willoughby Spit, Norfolk, Va.

She has also operated her own business, People, Inc., a placement service for hotels and motels in the Washington, D.C. area.

Since joining Quality International, she has served as director of sales for company-owned inns, director of sales for franchise units, manager of special marketing programs, and director of franchise administration in Southern U.S.A. In her current position, she provides on-property assistance in marketing and sales, organizes sales blitzes, conducts sales seminars and marketing plan workshops, and advises and participates in regional programs. In the past year, she logged over 150,000 miles.

She has been designated as a Certified Hotel Administrator, an award presented by the American Hotel/Motel Association to experienced and knowledgeable hotel personnel with at least 10 years of experience who have passed a specially designed examination covering all phases of hotel administration. She was also the first recipient of the Harriet Kocher Award, presented by the International Operators Council of Quality International, for her outstanding contribution to the licensees of the organization.

She is a member of the Hotel Sales Management Association International, serving on the board of directors of the Potomac Chapter in 1975-1976. She has been a member of the Virginia Travel Council since 1955, the National Tour Association since 1971, and the American Bus Association since 1980.

Although Ms. Kocher maintains a home in Springfield, Va., her base of operations is in Phoenix, Arizona.

John W. Thomas '47

A resident of Hamburg, Pa., Mr. Thomas has completed his 25th year of service on the Bloomsburg University Alumni Board of Directors as either an active or honorary life member. He has served as president and vice president of the Alumni Association and has provided leadership and wise counsel at times when the Association took bold steps. He played a key role in the decisions to conduct the initial Annual Fund Campaign in the mid-1970s, to employ a full-time executive director, and to purchase the Fenstemaker Alumni House. He actively served on the search committees for both full-time directors of alumni affairs. He did this while maintaining a very successful insurance, real estate and investment firm in Hamburg.

A native of Scranton, he attended the public schools there and was graduated from Scranton Central High School in January 1939. He enrolled at Bloomsburg State Teachers College in September 1940, but interrupted his studies to serve with the U.S. Army Air Force from February 1943 to February 1946. After the war, he returned to BSTC and was graduated in August 1947.

He joined the Aetna Casualty and Surety Company in September 1947 and subsequently graduated from the Aetna Agents' School on November 1, 1947. (He later graduated from John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company's Agents' School on November 1, 1954.) After six years as a field representative for Aetna, he established a general insurance agency in Hamburg on September 1, 1953. He added real estate and investment sales a few years later. He retired on January 1, 1985, and now enjoys bridge, golf and reading.

He is a member and past president of the Hamburg Jaycees and Rotary, a member of St. John's Lutheran Church of Hamburg, a member of the local, state and national independent insurance agents associations, as well as local, state and national Boards of Realtors.

He and his wife, the former Louise E. Seaman Thomas '42, are the parents of two daughters, Susan Lee Thomas Kalfas and Jane Elizabeth Thomas.

A. William Kelly '71

Mr. Kelly discovered radio broadcasting in the seventh grade. At 13 he was working at WTTC in Towanda, Pa., describing everything from canoe races to horse-pulling contests. Today, he is vice president and station manager of WVIA-TV/FM, the Public Television and Radio stations for Northeastern Pennsylvania.

While pursuing his education, Kelly performed on-the-air and created special public service projects at several radio stations in Pennsylvania and New York State. His efforts as station manager of WYBG in Massena, N.Y., resulted in the long-delayed purchase of a new ambulance for the community. At WARM, Scranton/Wilkes-Barre, his 20-mile winter walk for the March of Dimes raised over $20,000 to fight birth defects. Two years after the flood that wiped out Wilkes-Barre, Kelly pointed out the natural beauty of the region in WARM's 100-mile "Great Canoe Expedition" down the Susquehanna River.

Today, Kelly is responsible for overall television station operations and is executive producer of several programs, among them the station's popular weekly phone-in series, "Call the Doctor." He has also coordinated coverage of news events, produced musical specials and hosted several programs on Channel 44. The Corporation of Public Broadcasting has recognized his efforts in fundraising and audience building with two national awards. He has also received the Pennsylvania Medical Society's Walter F. Donaldson Award for Outstanding Medical Journalism and the Outstanding Volunteer Leadership Award of the Northeastern Chapter of March of Dimes.

He is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin Executive Management Institute and has participated in several management and fundraising seminars conducted by PBS. A popular speaker on the subject of videotapes in the courtroom, Kelly has addressed the Pennsylvania Defense Institute and a joint meeting of the Allegheny County Bar Association and Medical Society in Pittsburgh.

Kelly is president of the Marian Sutherland Kirby Library Board of Directors in Mountaintop, Pa., and is an instructor of mass communications at Bloomsburg University.

He and his wife, Janice, are the parents of three children. Their home is in Mountaintop.

Patrick Haggerty

Mr. Haggerty has been a booster of Bloomsburg University for many years and was a founding member of the Husky Club in 1974. He continues to serve on the Board of Directors and has been active on various other committees.

A native of Pittston, he was graduated from Woodrow Wilson High School in Minooka and attended the University of Akron. He served with the U.S. Army's 75th Division during World War II. He was graduated from the Pennsylvania State Police Academy and served 24 years, reaching the rank of corporal, before retiring in 1965 to become Bloomsburg's chief of police. He served the Town in that capacity until retiring in 1979.

Active in the community, he is a former member of the board of directors of the Bloomsburg Chapter of the American Red Cross and is active in the blood donor program. He is also a member of the Frosty Valley Country Club, the Bloomsburg American Legion Post 273, B.P.O.E. Lodge 436, Fraternal Order of Police, Retired State Police Association, Retired Chiefs of Police Association, and Friendship Fire Co. He is an active member of St. Columba Catholic Church, Bloomsburg, and formerly served on the Parish Council.

He is married to the former Mary McNerney of Scranton, who retired after a long career as a secretary at Bloomsburg University.

Howard E. McKinnon

A Bloomsburg University Foundation board member, Mr. McKinnon is president of Berwick Forge and Fabricating, a major supporter of the University Scholarship Fund that exists within the Foundation.

Mr. McKinnon earned a finance degree at the University of Connecticut and served in Viet Nam. He was a key figure in organizing the management buyout of Berwick Forge and Fabricating from the Whittaker Corp. in 1983.

He is affiliated with the Business Associates Program, which is a subcommittee of the Foundation which works with local businesses and community members to raise funds for the University.

He serves on the board of directors of the Frosty Valley Country Club and the Berwick YMCA. He is also a member of the Husky Club, the Bloomsburg Elks, and attends St. Columba Church in Bloomsburg.

Mr. and Mrs. McKinnon are the parents of a son, Jeffrey, a student at Central Columbia High School, and Tracie, a student at BU.

SUSIE RAYOS MARMON '06, Laguna Pueblo's matriarch educator who enjoyed her rich Indian heritage and stressed a strong educational background for her people, died April 4 at age 110.

She was born the only child of Indian parents in Paguate, near Laguna, N.M., in 1877, and was named Dawa-Go-Mai-Tsa. She was given the name Susie when she was sent to an Albuquerque Presbyterian mission, now Menaul School.

She recognized April 15 as her birthday because she was born during the lambing season in 1877. That was the year after the battle of Little Big Horn and 35 years before New Mexico joined the Union.

Fluent in her native Keres and English, Susie was recognized as the first college graduate of her tribe. Had she lived another 11 days, the tiny, frail woman would have celebrated her 111th birthday.

With family members nearby, Susie died in her sleep at 8:30 a.m. on Monday, April 4, after eating her breakfast at the Laguna Rainbow Nursing Center. She was the Rainbow Center's first resident when the home opened nearly two years ago.

Her family had not planned anything special for her 111th birthday, said her son-in-law, Ray C. Goetting of Laguna, a retired business management consultant for Indian tribal government.

"Susie just recovered from a bout with pneumonia about three weeks ago at the Acoma-Laguna Public Health Center Hospital. We probably would have had a private family gathering. We didn't want to plan anything overly exciting for her."

Marmon, who devoted much of her life to her people in advocating higher education and in serving as a tribal delegate for the Laguna Land Claims, was honored by Gov. Garrey Carruthers last year when April 15 was proclaimed "Susie Rayos Marmon Day." In addition, the 19 New Mexican Pueblo governors, through the All Indian Pueblo Council, honored her "for her untiring efforts on behalf of all Indian people."

The North American Indian Women's Association, in its 1972 convention, honored Marmon as the outstanding woman in the field of education, for her 50 years as a teacher at both Laguna and Isleta pueblos.

NINA OLMISTEAD '06 of Long Beach, Calif., died March 1 at age 101. A native of Susquehanna County, she lived in Taylor from 1895 to 1985, when she moved to Los Angeles. WILLIAM DUGAN '49, principal of Connellsville Junior High School East, has retired after 45 years in education, including 22 in administration. Before graduating from Bloomsburg, he attended Lenoir-Rhyne College in North Carolina and served in the military. He also completed graduate courses at Bucknell, Penn State and Pitt.

He began teaching in Missouri, then returned to Pennsylvania to coach at Montoursville. In 1955 he moved to Norwin, and in 1958 he joined the faculty at Connellsville.

LOIS and WILMER NESTER '49 of Pen Argyl returned recently from a trip to the Holy Land and Egypt. In Israel they toured Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Bethany, Nazareth, Jericho and the Dead Sea area, including Masada, Tiberias, the Sea of Galilee and Capernaum.

While they encountered no problems due to the unrest in Israel, soldiers were very much in evidence, and some areas were off-limits to tour groups.

They enjoyed a boat ride on the Sea of Galilee and took a 15-hour bus trip from Tiberias to Cairo, crossing the Sinai Desert and the Suez Canal.

In Egypt, they toured Cairo and visited the museum which houses the treasures of King Tut's tomb. They also rode camels and saw the Pyramids and the Sphinx.

MARJORIE FULLER SOWERS '49 of Milton died June 19 at age 61. She formerly taught in Ismay, Montana, and was a librarian at Swarthmore College. She also worked in the testing laboratory at H. Warshaw and Sons, Milton. She was an active volunteer in church and civic organizations and was the founder and first chairperson of the North Central Chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Surviving are her husband, Charles H. Sowers; a son, Lars M. Sowers; a daughter, Meg Louise Kerstetter; two grandchildren and a twin sister.

A Note from Arnle: I write being just relieved of great anguish. My wonderful aunt (Bloomsburg 1933) lives next door and our Quarterlies arrive simultaneously. Naturally we compare the Classes of 1933 (when I was born) and 1955 (when Harvey Andruss relented and gave me a diploma). I was very happy for Melba Beck Hyde '33 being noted in the last edition.

I also felt relief, knowing that nothing listed about my class means no one died recently. Yet, I admit to being bothered that most other classes boasted of one or two alumni who were being touted for something, and 1955 listed just me as representative and nothing else. However, tonight we realized that my phone number is incorrect. Listed is half of my home number and half of my office number.

I checked with Ma Bell's dead number office and learned that 57 calls had been logged to this wrong number. Each of these calls was obviously a superintendency, a promotion, a listing with Fortune 500 or a new suit for John Panichello, which was a hand-me-down from John Angus.

I'm sure if the Alumni Office will list (717) 639-1515 as my correct number, the next Quarterly will be filled with accolades, awards, tributes and spelling bee winners.

Take heart fellow classmates of 1955 - we're about to stop hiding our light under a bushel (or a coffee can even).

JOHN CHRUNHEY '56 has been selected by the Association for Systems Management to receive one of its Distinguished Service Awards for 1988. He has been employed by Dunkin' Donuts Incorporated in Randolph, Mass., since 1972, serving as director of systems development for over 11 years and division controller for over five years.

To qualify for the DSA, the applicant must have a minimum of three years of membership and a prescribed number of points for chapter service, international level service and public speaking and/or published articles.

Prior to joining Dunkin' Donuts, he was employed by Auerbach Corporation in Philadelphia and Boston (1968-1972) and by Liberty Mutual Insurance Company in Pennsylvania, Syracuse, N.Y., and Boston (1956-1968).

He completed graduate work at the University of Pittsburgh, Lehigh University and Syracuse University. He was a lecturer at Northeastern University from 1970 to 1981. He is active in numerous professional and civic activities.

He and his wife, the former Marlan A. Walsh '56, are the parents of five children: George, 31; James, 29; John, 27; Jeffrey, 21; and Culleen, 22.

ELVIN C. LaCOE '56 has earned a doctorate in education at Nova University in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Nova's innovative doctoral program focuses on development of leadership skills which have immediate applications to real-life situations in the schools. Dr. LaCoe's program was completed while a member of Nova's Williamsport cluster.

The major practicum of his doctoral study dealt with designing and implementing an administrative evaluation compensation plan to strengthen the administrative team concept. He also pursued an additional practicum for development and implementation of a program for increased success for youngsters at the first grade level.

He earned a master's degree in educational administration at the University of Scranton in 1964 and completed course work at Lehigh University in 1975 for his superintendent's letter of eligibility. He also took graduate courses at Bucknell University, Marywood College and Penn State.

He joined the elementary faculty of Abington Heights School District in 1956 and was named principal of the Grove Street Elementary School in 1963. After serving as assistant elementary supervisor, he was appointed elementary supervisor in 1966 and served in that post until he was named assistant superintendent in 1974. He was elected superintendent in 1983 and was appointed to a second four-year term in 1987.

Dr. LaCoe has served as an instructor on the graduate faculty of Marywood College, as an evaluator of student teaching programs for the Pennsylvania Department of Education, and for nine years was administrator of instructional services in Abington Heights.

A member of Phi Delta Kappa, he is active in the American and Pennsylvania Associations of School Administrators and the American and Pennsylvania Associations of Supervision and Curriculum Development. He has served as an officer of the Northeast Region of PASCD and on its legislative committee at state level. He was the legislative committee representative to PASA for Northeastern Intermediate Unit 19 and currently serves on the PASA Board of Governors.

In the community, Dr. LaCoe is president of Rotary Club of the Abingtons. He serves on the board of directors of Junior Achievement, Inc., is a member of the Penn Can Chapter of PIAA basketball officials, assigned in the Northeast Athletic Conference. He has coached Little League baseball and Abington Community basketball, and has managed Abington Teener League teams.

Dr. LaCoe and his wife, the former Esther Lloyd, reside in Clarks Summit. Their son, Christopher, received a bachelor's degree in nursing at the University of Scranton in May.

Surviving are her parents, John and Mildred Trettel; her husband, L. Ray Marchetti; two daughters, Lynn and Jill; a sister, nieces and nephews.

JAMES F. SNYDER '58, Ph.D., associate professor of business administration at the College of Charleston, has been named recipient of the Citizens and Southern National Bank Teaching Professorship. This is the first endowed professorship in the School of Business and Economics and the second endowed chair at the college.

"This corporate gift honors one of our Business and Economics faculty for excellence in teaching in an institution where teaching our undergraduate students remains our primary mission," said Dean Howard Rudd. "This is a reflection of the importance of undergraduate education to the corporate world, and C&S should be proud of its generosity."

Snyder, who earned his Ph.D. in management from the University of Georgia, has completed 26 years of teaching at the College of Charleston, Arizona State University, high schools, executive development centers, on battleships, in manufacturing plants, and even on buses and in hotel lobbies where he worked with his students on the European travel-study program.

Snyder is widely recognized as an outstanding, dedicated and innovative teacher. A few years ago, he received the prestigious Leafy Award for Excellence in Free Enterprise Education by the Freedom's Foundation. Because he is committed to providing high quality advising to students and understands its impact on student performance, he is involved in the Peer Mentor program.

"Jim is the consummate motivator, communicator and teacher," says Rudd. "I continue to hear accolades about his artistry in the classroom, and have observed how little effort his teaching appears to take. But as one who has taught organizational behavior for nearly 15 years, I know the opposite to be true."

"Snyder is truly a gifted teacher and a most appropriate recipient of this significant award. The College of Charleston is indeed proud of his contributions to our VIPs, our students."

NANCY BARNETT ERWAY '64, who has achieved a number of firsts, was featured in a recent issue of Penn Lines. Excerpts of the article, written by Rebecca Forstrom, follow:

When the Tri-County Rural Electric Cooperative board asked Nancy B. Erway to fill her mother's place on the board in 1979, she accepted. Little did she know she'd soon break new ground for Pennsylvania rural electric cooperatives.

Elected president of the Tri-County REC board in August 1985 after a year as vice president, she became the first woman to serve as president of a Pennsylvania rural electric co-op. At the same time, she became the first woman to serve on the Pennsylvania Rural Electric Association's board of directors. She achieved another first when she was elected chairman of the PREA board during the statewide association's 1987 annual meeting, after serving as vice president for two years.

Erway's accomplishments place her in an exclusive category. In Pennsylvania, six women currently serve as elected directors on local rural electric co-op boards. Nationally, 219 women are among the over 10,000 directors on local boards. The ranks are expanding, however; four years ago, only 138 were women.

For years, Erway has balanced duties as a Tri-County board director with her responsibilities as a wife and mother of four, partner in the family potato farm, substitute teacher and volunteer at Gold Baptist Church and in her community.

She and her husband, Dale, are the parents of four children: Tim, a graduate of Bucknell University with a degree in mechanical engineering; Debbie, a former student at Bloomsburg University who is a senior at Penn State, majoring in ornamental horticulture; Sheila, a senior at Messiah College; and Jenny, a sophomore in high school.

HARRY HUMES '64, a member of the English Department faculty at Kutztown University, has had a volume of poems, RIDGE MUSIC, published by the University of Arkansas Press. To read the poems of Harry Humes is to hear the innate music of life in the tough Pennsylvania hill country. The poems of Harry Hurnes are stories; he tells them with a carnal energy and a refreshing clarity of line. There is nobody like him."

CHARLES "SONNY" McWILLIAMS '64 has retired as principal of the Fred W. Diehl School in Danville. McWilliams first taught in the Shikellamy School District, but returned to his native Danville as a teacher at Second Ward School. He then taught at Riverside Elementary School for 11 years before the move to the Diehl School in 1976.

He and his wife, NANCY McWILLIAMS '61, a guidance counselor at Danville High School, plan to do some travelling.

RONNEE Z. MOYER '64, East Penn School District community relations coordinator, has won a 1988 Golden Achievement Award from the National School Public Relations Association. The entry, "Publicizing the School Event," included a workshop and publication written and presented by Moyer for district staff, students, advisors and community support groups.

The program will be displayed with other winners at the NSPRA National Convention in New Orleans in July.

She earned an M.A. degree in English from Lehigh University in 1971 and has taught at Liberty High School in Bethlehem and at Emmaus High School.

A member of Who's Who in American Education, she lives in Allentown with her husband, John I. Moyer Jr., and their two sons.

JOHN R. UMLAUF '64 of Ashland died May 27 at age 68. A Navy veteran of World War II, he was a business teacher at Blue Mountain School District until his retirement. He also earned a master's degree at Bloomsburg.

Surviving are a brother, a sister, nieces and nephews.

ORVA WYNINGS WEBB '64 was recently honored by the Copperas Cover, Texas, office of Coldwell Banker for her sales record of more than $2 million in 1987.

She is a chief warrant officer in the Army Reserve and also owns and operates a grocery store.

HARVEY SCHLESSINGER '65 is manager of quality control at the Salk Institute, a producer of vaccines, in Swiftness. He obtained a Ph.D. in microbiology from Thomas Jefferson University and worked in the virology department at Children's Hospital in Philadelphia for over 10 years. His wife, Dianna, holds Ph.D. and M.D. degrees and is a physician in pulmonary care at Children's Hospital.

JENNIFER SMITH '68, a Philadelphia neighborhood activist and journalist, died March 4 of cancer.

Smith, a longtime resident of the Gloria Dei (Old Swedes) Church section of Queen Village, was a past president of the neighborhood homeowners association and a former officer in the Queen Village Neighbors Association.

In the 1970s, Smith was active in the successful effort to stop construction of Interstate 95 access ramps in the central riverfront district, and in other causes that sometimes placed her and her neighbors in opposition to city and state authorities.

Jeff Rush, the current QVNA president, remembers Smith as tough-minded and strongly opinionated, and as a good neighbor.

"She understood how the neighborhood was developing, and made it her business to bridge the gap between old and new neighbors," Rush said.

Smith moved to Philadelphia while in her 20s and worked as an advertising copywriter at several department stores. Later, she was employed in the marketing department at the Smithkline Beckman Corp., and, during the mid-1980s, as coordinator of catering services at the now-defunct New Market in Society Hill.

While active in civic affairs, Smith became editor/writer of the Queen Village Crier. In the early and mid-1980s, she brought her knowledge of local politics and the waterfront to the South Street Star in a weekly column called "Watch on the Waterfront." Last year, she was a frequent contributor to the South Philadelphia Review Chronicle.

Smith took a keen interest in the waterfront, particularly in the Penn's Landing area. She felt a special affection for the tall ship, Gazela Philadelphia, which makes Penn's Landing its home port.

Dominic Sabatini, executive director of Penn's Landing Corp., remembers her as a good reporter.

"She made it a point to know the players. She was very thorough in how she presented her stories."

She was an avid runner and an accomplished cook, who concocted several award-winning recipes. She made and sold her own costume jewelry, some of which was photographed for a display in Vogue magazine.

She is survived by a sister, Melissa, and a brother, Randolph.

The council isn't just a way to make presidents feel included or a strategy for building collegiality, however. It's a necessity, according to the chancellor, because of the minimal central staff. The presidents have to help supply management manpower.

Act 188 stipulated that only half of one percent of the funds allocated to the State System of Higher Education could be used for central office administration. That includes staff salaries, travel expenses, office rent and utilities, and costs of the quarterly Board of Governors' meetings. As a result, the entire staff, including clerical help, numbers only 42. In many states, system staffs are eight to ten times that size.

The State System staff is very overworked. The professionals and their assistants all have sacrificed personal lives to do the jobs as fully as they can. For most, working for the System is a cause, a calling. The staff gives not just 40 hours a week to the System, they give themselves. And, there will be no help coming because the central office budget is already at its ceiling.

Some staff members think the law should be changed to allow increased funding and more staff. Not everyone agrees. Vice Chancellor for Finance and Administration Wayne Failor says another answer is to lower the expectations placed on the central office. An advantage of "a thin, lean corporate staff," he says, "is that it limits the possibilities for the central office to get into the business of the universities and take away some of their responsibility."

Failor believes that it is not the job of the chancellor's staff to manage campuses. Sometimes, it is difficult to remember that, especially when something goes wrong and state officials point fingers and say, "Why did you let that happen?"

The transition from government agency status to autonomous institution has been a major one for each of the universities, Failor says. "It's resulted in a shaking out of bad managers. Campus administrators have really been challenged in the last five years. Accountability is now a function of each university," he says.

"In the old days, every decision required six signatures on campus and five more in Harrisburg. If something got screwed up, it was the 'fault of Harrisburg.' Now if it's not right, the university president is accountable. I think this is healthy for our campuses."

The vice chancellor for academic affairs, Dr. M. Emily Hannah, is interested in System-wide ventures and has created a procedure for approving new academic programs that incorporates central office involvement and ensures the integrity of each new program.

Hannah says her process requires that the universities involve her staff from the beginning of program development. "Our staff can provide a great deal of assistance. Also, we may bring in consultants or an accrediting agency to cover all aspects of creating a new academic program. I look at it as a cooperative venture with the university and as an effective program approval process. Instead of curriculum proposals landing on my desk cold and needing a lot of study, now by the time we get to the approval stage, all that might be needed are some subtle refinements."

What's coming down the road in the way of new academic programs?

Hannah says the most significant new programs will be fields of engineering. "Already, engineering technology programs (covering only technical applications) have been approved from California and Cheyney Universities. Both Millersville and California may be able to develop full-fledged engineering majors. That's not going to happen quickly, but I think it will be a reality in the next decade."

She believes the greatest need is in the area of science education. "We badly need science teachers, and it is difficult to find science students interested in teaching when the salaries are so much higher in industry."

The field of teacher education is becoming stronger on each of the 14 campuses, according to Hannah. "The growing demand for teachers and for better teachers is influencing the ways teachers are being trained. I see a trend to integrate teacher preparation programs more fully with the liberal arts curriculum. That's a positive change."

Hannah has developed two System-wide programs, and she is pleased with both. The Pennsylvania Academy for the Profession of Teaching was created in 1986 to bring together K-12 educators with persons in higher education to work toward strengthening teacher preparation programs and to provide professional development programs (workshops, conferences, seminars, publications) for all teachers. The Academy has a director and an assistant who will be seeking grants to help fund their activities.

Hannah also heads up a Faculty Professional Development Council made up of one faculty member and one administrator from each of the 14 universities. This council reviews faculty proposals for professional development projects on their campuses and awards grants to fund the projects. The monies for the program were negotiated in the faculty contract. For the current academic year, a total of $200,000 in grants has been awarded for faculty projects. Next year, the amount available will increase to $400,000. "The Council selects the proposals judged most innovative and most significant academically. I think this is an important program that encourages the development of our faculty as scholars and professionals," Hannah states.

Have there been any failures?

McCormick says he is disappointed about failing to achieve the level of success he had hoped for in the areas of affirmative action and desegregation. "I would have hoped by this time that we would have greater numbers of black faculty and students, not just to reach goals, but because of the number of Pennsylvanians not being served by higher education. I believe that our investment in the lives of black, Hispanic, and poor people is terribly important to the future of this state. This is one of the things we need to work on."

At a recent meeting of the Board of Governors in West Chester, the board adopted a new affirmative action "Prospectus," which is a policy statement for the 14 System universities. It covers minority student enrollment goals, employment goals, the status of women on campus, and equal opportunities for minority vendors.

Although the chancellor believes the System has had a commendable financial management record, the inability to convince the Commonwealth of the need for greater funding has been stressful. "We've never had a deficit in the System," McCormick says. "That was something we just had to do to gain credibility. Unfortunately, we have not been able to make the case for the kind of financial assistance we need. This is especially true in the lack of funds to expand and maintain our facilities. We have $1 billion worth of buildings and need $40 million a year just for maintenance—that doesn't include any new buildings. We're not getting even enough to keep what we have in shape."

Vice Chancellor Failor says accessibility is becoming one of the major problems of the System institutions. "On April 1, at least eight, maybe nine, of our universities had already closed admissions for next fall. Several schools are limiting enrollment because they can't handle any more students. Our campuses are plant-bound."

Despite a history of providing low-cost education to many students who may not otherwise have been able to attend college, the System has been turning away thousands of students and has been forced to raise tuition (already among the highest nationally in public institutions) to provide quality education for those admitted. Failor says this problem is not going to be solved quickly or easily.

Despite not being able to convince state government to fund the System institutions more adequately, Chancellor McCormick says, "We've come a long way. I've been going to the budget hearings in the General Assembly for 20 years. We presidents used to be embarrassed by the treatment we received and by our showing. We have become much more sophisticated. Our strong management is evident, and I think the credibility we have is obvious."

After years of trailing behind the rest of the nation, the Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education is now regarded as a good place to work and a good place to go to school. Among presidents, a position in a State System institution now carries a level of prestige that was not present five years ago.

The chancellor is proud of that, but says, "I am not quite satisfied with the progress. We have made great strides, but we have a lot more to do."

China

Vaughn is friends with many of the Chinese students at BU, and he visited their parents during his trip to China. "It was great to be able to bring them news of their children."

Vaughn is sponsoring a Chinese student who will study in the U.S. next year, and he expects to return to China "to check on the business and to fly kites again."

Update

James E. Tomlinson, chairperson of communication studies at BU, conducted research for six weeks this summer at the Beijing Broadcasting Institute, the only school in China to provide training in television and radio. BU graduate assistant Zhan Bo, a native of Beijing and instructor at the Institute, assisted with the research. Partially sponsored by BU's special initiatives fund, Tomlinson lectured at the Institute and explored opportunities for institutional cooperation, including the expanded use of BU's satellite capabilities.

Dean and Mrs. Macauley accepted an invitation to return to China this summer to finalize agreements with Chinese universities. They were accompanied by President Ausprich and his family.

When Marco Polo explored China, he discovered a culture both amazing and magnificent. Seven hundred years later, Bloomsburg University faculty are sharing that same amazement with students and alumni, and they are paving the way for others to teach and learn in China.

President Ausprich addresses alcohol, drug issues

As you know, universities are microcosms of our society. It is not surprising that many of the issues that are receiving prime consideration and attention across our nation are also the same issues we are addressing here at Bloomsburg University. In this and subsequent issues of The Alumni Quarterly, I want to share with you vital information on three very important topics: drug and alcohol abuse, assessment and affirmative action.

THE CONSUMPTION of alcohol by college students dates back centuries. Some historians trace it back to Greco-Roman days when students gathered to imbibe and discuss great issues.

Today, college students still imbibe in alcohol, and they do so in higher proportions than any other single population group in the United States. Although many students view alcohol as the great social elixir, it has had a significant destructive effect. There is evidence that students who abuse alcohol have ineffective personal relationships, earn lower grades, and drop out of school more often. It is a sobering fact that the leading cause of death for young people between the ages of 16 and 24 is alcohol-related accidents (U.S. Department of Transportation, 1984).

From President Ausprich

In the Summer 1988 issue of The Alumni Quarterly I asked for your help in changing attitudes about the importance of public higher education and the level of support required for our universities to remain strong. I promised to share information with you that you could use to assist in raising the collective consciousness

IN RESPONSE to the growing concern on our campus about the use and abuse of alcohol and other drugs, Dr. Jerry Griffis, the vice president for student life, has created an Alcohol and Drug Task Force. This task force is charged with developing policies and procedures that promote an environment that is supportive of the academic mission of the institution and that upholds the laws of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

The concern of our university community to this issue can clearly be seen in the positive response that was received when the call went out for volunteers to join the task force. Currently, the more than 75 individuals who volunteered are hard at work developing policies and procedures to help make our campus free of alcohol and drug abuse.

Specifically, the task force has been asked to:

- (1) assess the awareness, attitude and behavior of the campus community regarding the use and abuse of alcohol and other drugs;
- (2) develop an education program that provides accurate, current information on alcohol and drug abuse for students, faculty and staff;
- (3) develop a policy that addresses both individual and group behavior and includes all campus property and develop procedures for articulating the policy to all members of the university community, parents, alumni and the local community; and
- (4) establish procedures to insure all policies concerning drug and alcohol use are articulated clearly and are consistently enforced.

When the first draft of the report is completed, open hearings will be held on campus to allow for ample input from our university community. Should you wish to participate in these hearings, please contact Mrs. Jennie Carpenter, director of residence life and chair of the task force. The task force plans to submit their finished report next spring.

THIS YEAR, Bloomsburg University will again join colleges across the nation in declaring National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week, October 16-22. During this week last year, we offered over 40 programs in our residence halls. The residence life staff is already planning activities for this year to enhance and heighten the awareness of our campus to this important issue.

We want our students to have the best possible education and the best possible social experience here at Bloomsburg. We want our graduates to have happy memories of their collegiate years. Please join us in making our campus environment a safe and healthy one.

New award honors Grimes

What is your score for the year 1988? Are you one of those alumni who returned to campus for Alumni Weekend or who plan to attend Homecoming in October? Did you attend a chapter meeting in your area? Did you contribute to the Alumni Annual Fund? If you have answered yes to all these questions, then you qualify to receive the Richard "Burleigh" Grimes Loyalty Award!

This new award was created to recognize those "true blue" alumni who maintain contact with their Alma Mater. The award is appropriately named because Dick Grimes has missed Homecoming or Alumni Weekend only once since he graduated in 1949! He is currently serving on the Alumni Board of Directors and has been an active participant in alumni activities since he graduated. He even waited for Bloomsburg University to offer a master's degree in special education rather than go to any other university. "Burleigh" doesn't own a car, by the way, so almost all his trips to Bloomsburg in the past 40 years have been by bus! We can all learn from his dedication and loyalty!

STARTING IN JANUARY 1989, the names of all individuals who attend either Homecoming or Alumni Weekend, attend a chapter meeting, and participate in the Annual Fund each year will be listed in The Alumni Quarterly. To qualify for the award each year, the three criteria must be met. Also, we will also recognize alumni by the number of consecutive years they have earned the award — e.g., Two-Year Award, Three-Year Award, etc.

So that brings us to the question: Are you interested in having a chapter event in your area? Do you want the opportunity to meet with fellow alumni? You can be the catalyst in your area to network our alumni. We have alumni in every state! Why not get to know each other? The process is simple: Call Doug Hippenspiel at (717) 389-4058 to choose a date and suggest a restaurant or other meeting place. The Alumni Office does the rest!

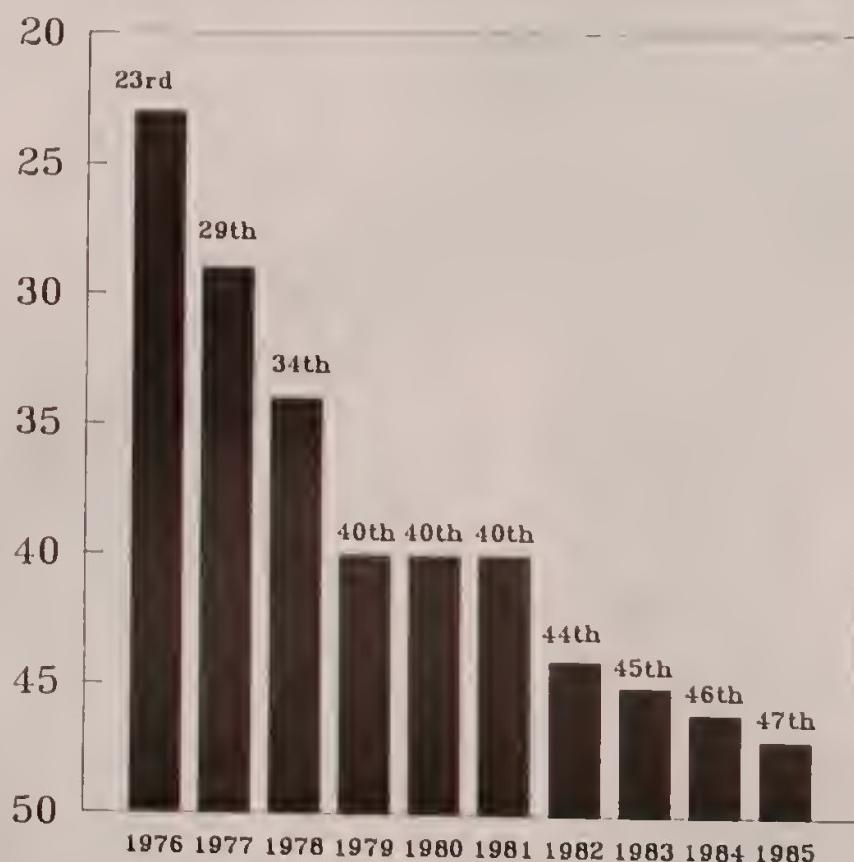

Your Alumni Association has as its mission the objective of bringing alumni together in as many states as possible to enjoy each other's company and to learn what is happening at the university. Won't you be a joiner? Call Doug today to set up a chapter event in your area!

Also, be sure to register when you visit the campus for Homecoming or Alumni Weekend! It's the only way we will know that you were with us.

We want YOU as a Richard "Burleigh" Grimes Loyalty Award recipient!

Mrs. Mitrani receives honorary degree

Bloomsburg humanitarian and philanthropist Louise Mitrani became the seventh person in the history of the university to receive an honorary doctorate when she was awarded a Doctor of Humane Letters degree at commencement exercises on August 18.

In her response, Mrs. Mitrani made the following statement:

"I stand in front of this distinguished gathering in humbleness to receive the great honor bestowed upon me. I have had the great privilege of living in this blessed land for 67 years, the marvel and beauty of which continues to fill me with wonder and awe. I understand why people from all over this globe dream to come and make this their home, with some losing their lives in the effort to smuggle themselves over our borders.

"We know of course that dream and reality are two different things. To be sure, life is not earthly paradise anywhere, and it is not meant to be. Half of the beauty of it is in the struggle—the effort of accomplishment, the discovery of the potentiality which lies quiescent in each of us, waiting to be discovered and developed. But no other country on this globe offers the opportunities that are possible here.

"History tells us of the great civilizations that were born, flourished, and then perished on this globe in the last 10,000 years. Downfall came with the breakdown of the moral and ethical codes of the leaders and population which follows great conquests and unlimited power.

"In the last 3,500 years we have had three great religions preaching and teaching moral and ethical precepts. Judaism, with the 10 commandments and the ethical codes of the Torah, which touch on every phase of life, teaching how every human being must behave towards his fellow man. Christianity with 'Love thy neighbor as thyself,' and 'Do unto others as you want them to do unto you.' And the religion of Islam, with Mohammed's teaching of ethics, and the moral and ethical laws from their holy book, The Koran.

"What happened to our enlightened western world, our sense of values, all our religious teachings, that we have been witnesses to the most horrendous act of inhumanity of man to man, the Holocaust? That act of unbelievable bestiality was spawned and spread in Europe, in a land of great culture, a land that gave us great composers, authors, philosophers, and sciences.

"Again, I turn to education in the hope that a better world can be built if every child is given an education he or she can absorb. By education, I mean in every field of endeavor. Of course, morality can never be too strongly emphasized. We should all be prepared to serve society the best way we possibly can in our chosen field of work.

"We have in the United States 28 million men and women who are illiterate, and seven more who read so poorly that the meaning of the sentence escapes them. They just read words. That represents 30 percent of our population. That is a bad record for the richest land on this globe.

"We have the financial means and the capability of eradicating this blight. And yet, it's unbelievable what has been accomplished in the quality of our life of our citizenry, in spite of the fact that so many of our people are illiterate. One can imagine what that does to the economy of our land. So much waste of human power, so much waste of brain power, which is not able to serve society properly.

"Ignorance is the curse of society. It is the element which breeds superstition, hatred, and brings out the worst which lays in human nature and under the least pressure can unleash itself in inhumanity of man to man.

"To the graduating class and all the students and young people, I would like to say that the future of our land lies in your hands. You have the opportunity, the youth, and education to fashion the world of your ideals.

"I would like to extend my sincere thanks to Dr. Ausprich, to every member of the Bloomsburg University trustees, and all who had a part in making this day the brightest ray of sunshine of all the bright days of my life. Thank you."

LOUISE BAKISH emigrated to the United States from Sofia, Bulgaria, in 1921 at the age of 16. She spoke no English but was fluent in three other languages. Soon after arriving in New York City, she enrolled in night school to learn her new homeland's native tongue. The language came easily; it was the long, full days of working hard to get established in a strange place, to learn a new way of life, to find friends, and the struggle to fit in—that was the difficult part.

In 1937, she married Marco Mitrani and came to Bloomsburg to live. Mitrani had come to the United States in 1920 from Adrianopolis, Turkey. He eventually settled in Bloomsburg where he founded Milco Industries, a textile manufacturer. The company grew, establishing plants in Berwick, Benton and Millville.

THE MITRANIS flourished in their new home. "I have loved Bloomsburg since the first day I arrived here," Mrs. Mitrani said in a recent interview. "I love it for its simplicity, calmness and beautiful countryside."

She soon became involved in community activities. She joined the Girl Scouts of America, an affiliation which she sustained for more than 25 years as a board member. In recognition of her years of service to this organization and of the Mitrani's gift of the original 200 acres of land, the Penns Woods Girl Scout Council named the local camp in her honor — Camp Louise.

Mrs. Mitrani is also a charter member of the Family Counseling and Mental Health Association and has served on its board of directors for 16 years.

In addition to their extensive community service, she and her late husband made numerous significant philanthropic contributions to organizations and institutions. The couple provided leadership for the United Jewish Appeal, helped build schools and a library in Israel, and assisted the Bloomsburg Hospital through gifts to its coronary care and intensive care units.

The Bloomsburg Theatre Ensemble has benefited from the Mitrani's generosity and sustained interest in the arts. Gifts from the Mitrani Family Foundation have included the donation of a building and funding for renovations and improvements to a set workshop and classroom.

HER PARTICULAR LOVE of music and the fine arts as well as the Mitrani's shared interest in young people and a zealous belief in the value of education have forged a link between this family and Bloomsburg University. The Mitrani's have long supported cultural programs on campus, and they became charter members of the Celebrity Artist Series' subscribers program. In 1985, they donated $500,000 to establish the Marco and Louise Mitrani Scholarship Program. The family's second donation in June of 1988 has boosted that fund to $1 million for academic scholarships at the university.

In June, Mrs. Mitrani donated $75,000 to the University Foundation for its Arts Endowment Fund. Three years ago, the Mitrani's provided substantial funds for major acoustical improvements to the main auditorium of Haas Center for the Arts. At that time, the university's Council of Trustees named the auditorium the "Louise and Marco Mitrani Hall," the site of many of the university's cultural programs and performances.

'Birthday' campaign for library

Plans are in the early stages to launch a Sesquicentennial Library Campaign in 1989 to benefit the Harvey A. Andrus Library. According to Anthony M. Taniero, director of development, this campaign will support the non capital, current and future needs of our expanding library.

Although library space is a critical issue, other concurrent needs for funding beyond the regular university allocation remain paramount. Special resources are needed to enhance the library's holdings and services. Such holdings and services might include purchase of periodicals and microforms, provision of additional study areas and terminals for an on line catalog.

A request for a new library facility has been submitted to the State System of Higher Education. This continues to be part of the system's capital budget proposal to the General Assembly.

A goal concept being considered for the Sesquicentennial Library Campaign is for reunion classes to pledge a five-year commitment. Pledges will be sought during the first three years of the campaign.

Students have already made their commitment. This past spring, the Community Government Association pledged $250,000 ($50,000 annually for five years) as a challenge gift to our alumni and friends in support of the library.

The campaign will be conducted separately from, but concurrently with, the Annual Fund Drive. More information about the campaign will appear in future issues of The Alumni Quarterly.

(Editor's Note: The following article was researched and written by Jean Dickenson Applegate '46.)

Carver Hall, stately symbol of Bloomsburg University. How many of us have walked through her doors innumerable times and sat in her classrooms without giving a thought to the man for whom she is named? Carver, Waller, Hartline, Haas — names without faces, brick walls unrelated to flesh and blood.

I found myself in this situation last year when researching an article on the Manasquan School System for a centennial history book about our borough. The name Henry Carver appeared when I was perusing old newspapers and seemed vaguely familiar. However, I paid little heed until I realized this was really Bloomsburg's Henry Carver.

Deciding I wanted to know more about the life of Professor Henry Carver, I reached for Eda Bessie Edwards' book on the history of Bloomsburg University, Profile of the Past, a Living Legacy.

HENRY CARVER was a man of exceptional stature who devoted his entire life to the pursuit of education. He was originally from Binghamton, N.Y., had taught at Union Academy in Brighton, N.Y., and had started a college in Oakland, California. Mrs. Edwards' book states that he headed the preparatory department of the University of California before coming to Bloomsburg.

While in California, he lost a hand in a hunting accident and wore an iron hook attached to his elbow. He took great pride in his driving ability as he drove a fine team of horses around town, using reins of special design.

In the spring of 1866, while recuperating from that accident, he visited the Susquehanna Valley. At the time they were having a great deal of difficulty maintaining order in their Academy in the town of Bloomsburg. The townspeople persuaded Professor Carver to start a school which became known as the Bloomsburg Literary and Commercial Institute and Pennsylvania State Normal School, today known as Bloomsburg University.

Professor Carver's first school in the Academy building was successful. However, when he was asked to return for a second term, he said he would remain only if new facilities were provided, noting that teaching conditions in the old building were inadequate and not conducive to good education.

Henry Carver was elected principal of the Bloomsburg Literary Institute and was told to construct a building, cost not to exceed $15,000. He was the architect and general contractor for the new building, and he was listed in the earliest catalogs as "Henry Carver, Principal; Professor of Civil Engineering and Intellectual and Moral Philosophy."

The new building, called Institute Hall, was built and completely furnished in the spring of 1867 at the cost of $24,000. Two daughters of Henry Carver were on the faculty: Miss Sarah taught botany, and Miss Julia taught music.

In 1868 Carver was awarded a contract to build a boarding hall at a cost not to exceed $36,000. The cornerstone was laid June 25, 1868, and the following February the four-story brick dormitory was ready for its occupants. The cost of boarding students attending 20 weeks was $100.

Professor Carver remained at Bloomsburg until 1871, when he left because of ill health and a financial disagreement with the Board of Trustees. His difficulties with the trustees are well chronicled in Eda Bessie Edwards' book.

ACCORDING TO HIS OBITUARY from The Rocky Mountain News, February 22, 1889, Henry Carver must have gone to Denver immediately after leaving Bloomsburg because it states that he was superintendent of schools in East Denver in 1871. To quote directly: "He remained in that capacity about one year and was compelled to go to a different climate on account of his health."

From 1874 to 1876, and possibly longer, Professor Carver was the supervising principal in the Vineland, N.J., High School. When the new high school building was dedicated on August 22, 1874, President Ulysses S. Grant participated in the ceremonies along with several members of his cabinet. They traveled on a special train from Long Branch, where Grant was vacationing at the seashore. At this time, special thanks were extended to Professor Carver for making the occasion possible. At the time, the city of Vineland was noted for its healthful climate.

In the fall of 1882, Henry Carver was announced as the principal of the Manasquan, N.J., Public Schools, which was known to be difficult to manage. In 1880 the town had built a new two-story brick school building containing four classrooms. Many scholars from the surrounding rural communities attended this school, and approximately 150 pupils enrolled when the new building opened.

The Manasquan Seaside of November 3, 1882, stated: "Professor Carver has held a similar place in several first class institutions of learning in New York State and the West. The increased prosperity of each one of these institutions he has had charge of speaks volumes for his system of conducting a school and is the best evidence of his superior fitness for supervising successfully all the affairs of an educational institution. His ability to discipline a school is remarkable. The thorough training and progress of his pupils, their admirable deportment, both in school and out, afford the best commentary upon his masterly oversight of all the essentials of a school that can be afforded. The citizens of Manasquan should be proud of the fact that we have a gentleman in charge of our school who bears such a reputation and is so eminently qualified in every particular. He should be encouraged by the parents of his pupils and made to feel that his efforts in our midst are appreciated."

On Friday, April 27, 1883, the newspaper reported, "Professor Henry Carver, principal of the public school, has been invited to deliver the annual address of the Commencement Exercises of the High School of Shenandoah City, Pa., on June 1. It is in the neighborhood of the State Normal School of which Professor Carver was principal for a long time, and he anticipates much pleasure in accepting the invitation as it will afford him an opportunity to meet his old friends. It is a compliment to our village, as well as to the professor that the principal of our public school should be called so great a distance to deliver such an address."

Apparently Professor Carver had a very successful first year in Manasquan, because an account of the graduation exercises of the public school, dated May 18, 1883, concludes: "We are proud of our public school and hope its trustees may be able to secure Professor Carver to take charge of it with the same corps of teachers for another year. . . . pupils, thoroughly taught, making remarkable progress in their studies, and have been firmly but kindly disciplined."

WHEN SCHOOL OPENED the following September, Professor Carver inserted in The Sea Side a letter to the parents which follows. His philosophy of education is set forth clearly.

"Though teaching is an arduous and wearing occupation, we have ever looked upon the work of the true educator as the highest employment to which man can be called. To be engaged in creating in the minds of youth a love for knowledge, for the sake of good it will do them in after life, helping them to form correct habits of thought, of self-control, of punctuality, in the discharge of every duty; in teaching them their dependence upon and obligation to each other, in inspiring their minds with a love for truth and justice, in short to help the young grow up into perfect men and women, is a work most beautiful to contemplate; and happy are those teachers, who engaged in teaching children whose parents desire the accomplishment of these great and grand results, we have never been able to see why there should be any conflict; and indeed I do not think there is any when the parties understand each other. It certainly is for the comfort and pleasure of teachers to carry forward the work as smoothly as possible and accomplish the objects for which our schools are, or should be, maintained."

"It may require some little self-denial, sometime on the part of parents to furnish their children with the necessary books and to see that they are in school regularly and punctually, but the results will amply repay for such sacrifices. As we have entered upon another year under favorable circumstances, will each department, parents, officers, teachers, and pupils see to it, that each discharges its whole duty in order that results most grand and satisfactory may be accomplished in the school in Manasquan during the present year? The teachers will do the best they can and can do well if parents will cooperate. With great regards for patrons, I have the honor to be, Principal."

ON DECEMBER 14, 1883, an account of an impromptu examination by Professor Carver of part of the large class (56) of the highest department of the public school appears in Manasquan Seaside. The examination covered two solid hours and was thorough. The observer was very favorably impressed and stated, "It was an exciting game between master and pupils, and the pupils did not come off second best. Seriously, I remember no examination I ever attended in any school, more creditable to both principal and pupils. And my conviction is, that as far as the studies reach, our Manasquan public school is now second to no other in the state in the thoroughness of the teaching and the attainments of the scholars. As one of the people, I congratulate Professor Carver and his teachers for their manifest success, and I congratulate ourselves for our good sense in sustaining them in what for a while was hard, up-hill work."

A week later, the same person wrote a letter to the editor stating that Professor Carver's high school room, which is inconveniently crowded, should be for high school pupils exclusively in justice to him, to them and to those not far enough advanced to benefit by instruction that properly belongs in that room. He recommended that the lowest pupils in each room be put back one level except for two difficulties — parental objections and expense. He suggested using tuition money from "Outside Pupils" to hire a primary teacher and to rent and heat another room.

Early in May, 1884, a notice was given of final examinations to be held the next week. The newspaper stated that the exams were strictly impartial with the problems being drawn by lot. To quote directly: "Evidently they (the pupils) had been trained to think, not to work by rule, but by rule and principle, . . . In short, of the high school department, it can truly be said that the work done there has not been surpassed by any high school in Monmouth County. . . . The writer has not heard and does not know whether Professor Carver is to be continued as principal of the Manasquan school or not, but he has heard from many and does know for himself that Mr. Carver is an admirable disciplinarian and an unsurpassed teacher. His pupils so behave under him and their minds are developed by him. . . . Should such a teacher and principal be permitted to leave us if his services can be retained?"

In spite of the foregoing compliments, the local school opened on September 17, 1884, with S. Garwood Lippincott, principal, and the Manasquan Seaside announced: "We understand from the District Clerk of School District No. 95 (Brielle) the services of Professor Henry Carver have been returned for the ensuing year. The school will be opened Monday, September 14."

This may have been an involuntary transfer because at that time Manasquan was one of ten school districts in Wall Township. District 95 (Brielle) was a smaller school only a few miles distant from District 92 (Manasquan), and Professor Carver would have been able to continue boarding in the village of Manasquan. The newspaper had reported at the end of February 1884 that Professor Carver was seriously ill at the Osborn House where he was boarding. Therefore, perhaps Professor Carver because of health problems had requested the transfer to a school which might be easier to manage.

Professor Carver died February 20, 1889, at Glenwood Springs, Colorado, where he was undergoing the treatment of the baths. He was 68 years of age. His funeral was from the residence of his son-in-law, H. G. Wolf, Highlands. His daughter, Mrs. Wolf, and his son, George H. Carver, were with him at the time of his death.

HENRY CARVER was a man of remarkable ability who was ever ready to face a challenge. In spite of ill health which bothered him wherever he went, he refused to succumb to it. He did not hesitate to accept teaching positions where the circumstances were less than ideal. He was an educator who knew the value of good public relations and made use of such media as was available to establish a good rapport between his school and the community as a whole. He was an innovator who accomplished things.

Practically singlehandedly he built and established what has become Bloomsburg University, a leading seat of learning in the state of Pennsylvania. He started a college in California. He helped build a new high school in Vineland, N.J., and he was instrumental in establishing the local school system of Manasquan, N.J. These are just a few of Henry Carver's accomplishments. There remain many areas of his life to be explored.

See you at Homecoming!

BU listed in book as one of 'the best'

Bloomsburg University is one of 115 public colleges and universities listed as "the best" for students to receive a top quality education in a new book to be released in September.

How to Get an Ivy League Education at a State University, by Martin Nemko of Oakland, Calif., describes 11 criteria used by the author in choosing the top 115 institutions. Noting that "of course, all 115 colleges didn't rate equally well on the 11 criteria," Nemko said he assessed:

- the quality of students,
- the quality of faculty,
- the percentage of undergraduate students,
- quality courses in the liberal arts and sciences,
- the quality of the honors program,
- class size,
- special programs for freshmen and sophomores,
- the residential program,

- the size of the university or college,
- reputation, and
- location.

THE FIVE PAGES of the book devoted to Bloomsburg University provide a profile of the student body and describe typical class size and the scholars and honors programs, as well as other special programs, extracurricular activities, housing and the setting and location of the campus.

The section praises BU's high student retention rate and the general education requirements. It notes that although BU "still suffers from a slow-dying reputation as a teachers college," it "has grown into a solid comprehensive university, with the unusual combination of firm discipline and academic standards at a public college price."

PRESIDENT AUSPRICH said the book's assessment of the university is generally fair. "We are pleased to be included in this list of the top 115 public institutions. We, of course, have always known we provide excellent educational opportunities at an affordable cost."

In the chapter one lists of colleges and universities with outstanding features, Bloomsburg is mentioned as being a university where teaching counts more than research in hiring and promoting faculty, where there is an outstanding honors program, one that is a small college, and a university with small classes.

Information for the book was gathered by Nemko through questionnaires administered to students and administrators, by statistical data provided by the university, and through examination of admissions materials, the catalog, and student publications such as The Voice and the student handbook, The Pilot.

THE MAGEE CENTER — Bloomsburg University has begun to use the Magee Center, a gift of the Harry L. Magee family. In mid-August, the School of Extended Programs moved to the former Magee home at 700 West Main Street, adjacent to the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds. Other plans for use of the center have not been finalized.

Assistant cage coach named

BILL WHITNEY, a 32-year-old native of Rutherford, N.J., has been named assistant basketball coach at BU. He formerly was assistant coach at Fairleigh Dickinson University for one season and head coach at Rutherford High School for six seasons. While at Rutherford his teams won two state championships and a pair of league titles.

A 1978 graduate of Adams State College in Alamosa, Colorado, Whitney will also serve as assistant track and field coach.

Former dean dies in Florida

EDSON J. DRAKE, former dean of arts and sciences at Bloomsburg, died in St. Petersburg, Fla., at age 68. He retired from Bloomsburg in 1984 after 22 years of service.

An Air Force veteran of World War II and the Korean Conflict, he received the Distinguished Flying Cross. He earned a bachelor's degree at Notre Dame University, and a master's degree and doctorate from Georgetown University. He also attended Oxford University in England.

Surviving are his wife, the former Patricia Elizabeth Rice; four daughters, Mrs. Joseph T.

55% have doctorates

Fifty-five percent of the faculty members at BU have doctoral degrees, according to the latest faculty and administrative report issued by the office of planning, institutional research and information management at the university. The report shows that of the 348 full-time faculty members, 209 have a doctorate, 132 have a master's degree, and seven have bachelor's degrees.

Ninety-three with doctorates are full professors, 61 are associate professors, 56 are assistant professors and four are instructors. The doctor of philosophy degrees are more prevalent than doctor of education degrees, 177 to 42.

AHEAD OF SCHEDULE — Construction of a $5.35 million student housing project on the Upper Campus is ahead of schedule. The first of the six apartment buildings, containing a total of 96 two-bedroom apartments, may be finished in time for the spring semester. By the time the project is finished, it will provide housing for 380 students.

Assistant to proxy named

GAIL DERCK has been appointed staff assistant to President Anspach, effective July 12. She served as temporary admissions counselor at BU during the 1987-1988 academic year.

Prior to that, she was associate director of admissions and acting director of admissions at Cedar Crest College in Allentown. She previously held admissions positions at Elizabethtown College.

She earned a bachelor's degree in human behavior and development at Drexel University in 1974 and a master's degree in elementary education at West Chester University in 1976.

Roy's outdoor experience and management skills directing our program," Trathen said. "Along with his creativity and vision, he has a good track record in fundraising and is an outstanding speaker in the outdoor movement. He is a dynamic, high energy individual."

In the 1970s, his accomplishments included ski expeditions in Alaska and the Arctic Circle, ascents of Mt. McKinley in Alaska and Mt. Kenya in East Africa, a first crossing of the Sea of Cortez in Mexico in a kayak, and a descent of the Colorado River through the Grand Canyon. In 1966, he was a member of the British expedition that made the first ascent of the 20,000-foot Alpamayo Mountains in the Peruvian Andes.

Hicks in development post

SUSAN R. HICKS '67, executive assistant to the president, is serving a temporary appointment in the office of development as an assistant director of development. She is responsible for special projects and writing materials to support the university's upcoming comprehensive campaign and other special fundraising initiatives.

"Sue's abilities and skills and her knowledge of this institution will help us immeasurably in the Development Office as we embark on major projects in connection with the celebration of the university's 150th anniversary," said Anthony Janiero, director of development.

Hamlisch opens series

Oscar-winning composer and pianist MARVIN HAMLISH will lead off the 1988-1989 Celebrity Artist Series at BU when he performs "An Evening with Marvin Hamlisch" at 8 p.m. on Thursday, October 20, in Mitrani Hall of the Haas Center for the Arts.

Committee named to write affirmative action plan

Several university administrators, staff and faculty members have been named by President Anspach to create two affirmative action plans for Bloomsburg University — a one-year plan for 1988-1989, and a companion three or five-year plan for subsequent years to 1992 or 1994.

Six graduates earn degrees in medicine

In case you missed the separate class notes in recent issues of The Alumni Quarterly, six BU graduates received M.D. or D.O. degrees last year.

Randall Rhodes, Debra Stahl Shah, and David Superdock received Doctor of Medicine degrees from the Pennsylvania State University College of Medicine at Hershey.

Mark Karpinski was awarded an M.D. degree by the Bowman Gray School of Medicine of Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, N.C.

Twin sisters Jane and Suzanne Illusnagle received Doctor of Osteopathic Medicine degrees from the Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine.

These news doctors pursued bachelor's degree programs at BU, including both high-quality liberal arts and scientific study. These opportunities included carefully planned curricula appropriate for admission to professional schools of medicine, dentistry, veterinary medicine and optometry.

Advisement for students interested in these health science careers is done by the Preprofessional Advisory Committee. This committee is composed of faculty members with extensive experience who keep up to date in these fields. This advisement embraces counseling on university degree programs and course sequences in both science and liberal education appropriate for admission to health science doctoral degree programs.

BU graduates have made excellent records in professional schools. Over 60 graduates have been admitted to such schools and have progressed successfully.

JOHN FOSTER MAGILL is a native of Pennsylvania. A World War II veteran, he served three years with the United States Army parachute troops. He was wounded in action when his parachute unit jumped behind enemy lines in Germany; his unit was honored with the Presidential Unit Citation.

A graduate of Bloomsburg University in 1948, he received his master's degree in 1953 and his doctorate in 1965 from The Pennsylvania State University.

Having served 35 years in public, private and higher education, he has had a number of magazine articles published; in addition, he recently self-published an educational handbook, About Public Education in America.

He is the recipient of a Freedoms Foundation Award and other civic and national honors.

He is married to the former Anna Martini, and they are the parents of five children: John, Susan, Thomas, Kathryn and Rebecca.

SUSAN MAGILL REYNOLDS is also a native of Pennsylvania. She was valedictorian of her high school graduating class in 1966 and graduated summa cum laude from Bloomsburg University in 1971 with a liberal arts degree.

She was employed as a writer and later as assistant to the director of public relations at Downstate Medical Center in Brooklyn, N.Y., from 1972 to 1975.

She is married to Edward Reynolds, a professional employee with the federal government. They are the parents of two children, Susan and Daniel, and have been residents of Virginia for the past 10 years.

She and her father have been actively researching and developing the manuscript and a potential sequel since 1976.

BOOK ONE in paperback can be secured at a pre-publication cost of $5.00 by sending a check to Turkey Valley Publications, P.O. Box 382, Millerton, PA 17062.

Freshman scholars named

Twenty freshman students have been selected for the University Scholars Program at BU from over 60 applicants, according to Dr. William Baillie, director of honors and scholars programs.

Eligibility was based upon high school achievement, SAT scores of 1100 or more, and a ranking in the top 20 percent of their graduating class. In addition to academic aptitude, applicants were judged on the basis of an essay, two references, and a personal interview.

The program, which was initiated in the fall semester of 1986, constitutes the first two years of the students' tenure at the university. The intent of the scholars program is to enable academically promising students to reach beyond the limits of a traditional college education and become part of a learning community which will challenge their abilities.

University scholars take specially-designed general education courses in a variety of disciplines. In addition, the students benefit from special seminars, faculty firesides, field trips, and cultural activities. Scholars in the program's first two years have assumed many leadership positions on campus in such roles as yearbook editor, fraternity and sorority presidents, and Sesquicentennial committee member.

The Scholars Program is supported financially by the Bloomsburg University Foundation. Each scholar this year was awarded a $750 merit-based scholarship to be applied to tuition in accord with guidelines of the University Scholarship Committee.

(Editor's Note: The following article was written by Lisa Habakus '89 and Wanda Willis '88.)

Established in 1985, the Husky Ambassadors promote the interests and goals of Bloomsburg University from a student's perspective. To accomplish this, these young men and women—representing the best qualities of the student body—participate in alumni and community events and frequently serve as official greeters for visitors to the campus.

"We link alumni, students, faculty and community by sponsoring special programs and by attending alumni function," said Michael Alban '88, last year's president of the organization. Other officers for 1987-1988 were Frank Schaffer, vice president; and Lori DiPasquale, secretary. Doug Hippenstein, director of alumni affairs, is the advisor.

"I have met many new and interesting people as an ambassador, which has helped me to broaden my perspective of the university and its role," said ambassador Lisa Musto '88.

SELECTED ON THE BASIS of academic record, extracurricular involvement, interpersonal and communication skills, poise and appearance, the 20 ambassadors include both Greeks and independents. They represent a wide variety of backgrounds.

The Ambassadors' activities include the Alumni-Student-Faculty Mixer and other activities on Homecoming, corporate visits, and alumni chapter visits. The group also hosts receptions, sponsors speakers, attends conferences and plans the Senior Send-Off Picnic each spring.

Held on the Friday afternoon of Homecoming Weekend, the Alumni-Student-Faculty Mixer gives students an opportunity to talk with alumni about careers. It also provides a setting to meet people and renew old friendships.

Sponsored by the Ambassadors, the corporate visits give students opportunities to visit companies in which they have an interest. Alumni working for the firms participate in the presentations and serve as hosts. Participating corporations in 1987-1988 included Air Products, Inc., Allentown; Shared Medical Systems (SMS), Malvern; Meridian Bank, Reading; and Liberty Mutual Insurance Company, Williamsport.

Although most ambassadors attend their first alumni chapter event with some apprehension, they quickly discover common ground — Bloomsburg University — despite the span of years. They discover that alumni are fascinating, exciting people who are interested in today's university students.

A MAJOR EVENT in late April is the Senior Send-Off Picnic, planned and promoted by the Ambassadors under the sponsorship of the Alumni Association. The picnic provides a social setting in which seniors can visit the Fenstemaker Alumni House and meet members of the Alumni Board of Directors.

Ambassadors also look forward to district and national conferences at which they can exchange ideas with their counterparts from all over the country. Last year the national conference was held at Clemson University in South Carolina, and the district meeting was held at Towson State University in Maryland.

"The conferences are terrific," said Diane Rude '89, this year's president. "Not only do I get some great ideas for the Ambassadors, but I also make some long-lasting friendships."

"I never knew there were so many student-alumni groups," added ambassador Kevin Cecco '88. "They're all over the United States and Canada."

Students apply for membership in the Husky Ambassadors each spring and must have a grade point average of at least 2.5 with 15 earned credits. Prospective ambassadors are invited to an information session to learn more about the organization and to meet current ambassadors.

Written applications are then reviewed by the ambassadors, and applicants are selected for personal interviews. Recommendations are submitted to the president of the University, who appoints the ambassadors for the following year.

WELCOME — Ambassador Kevin Cecco '88 talks with a prospective student and his mother during an open house program at the University.

He was a U.S. Navy veteran of World War II.

JOSEPH ELLSWORTH '42 writes: "I attended classes at Bloomsburg beginning in the early 1930s. I commuted on Saturdays and attended during summer sessions. If I remember correctly, the College had a dinner at the end of August 1942 for our graduation. I'm retired, have three married kids, and earned enough credits for a master's equivalent about 1950."

JOSEPHINE YOCUM KILBURY '42 writes: "Your letter brought back many happy memories of classmates and excellent instructors at Bloomsburg. I taught several years before I received a degree at Bloomsburg in 1942.

"My first four teaching years were in a rural school. I enjoyed those years and the teaching years to come. Through a Teachers Agency, I received a position in a district in the wealthy South Penn oil country in Elk County, Pa. The salary was much higher due to taxes from the wealthy oil companies. What an interesting place.

"I changed from Elk County to McKean County, another very wealthy oil area in those days. I taught third grade at Custer City for five years. This was five miles from Bradford, Pa. The salaries were excellent here, too. Then I changed to fifth grade in Bradford. Here I became an elementary teaching principal and started a master's degree at Penn State. While here, I married and retired from teaching. My husband died, and I went back to teaching in the West Branch Elementary School.

"I always loved teaching due to the wonderful students. I felt very sad when I had to retire at age sixty-five. At my present age of eighty, I have so many, many happy memories of students and parents. Teaching was a privilege."

DANIEL T. CANUSO '81 died of leukemia on June 20. The following report was sent to us by his friends:

After graduation, Dan worked as a vice president in his family's business, PESCO Pipe and Supply, Inc., Philadelphia.

Dan had a great love for many things, with hockey being one of his first loves, besides the love of his family and friends. Dan was an avid Flyer's fan with season tickets. He not only sat back and watched hockey, but he was actively involved in the National Novice Hockey Association. He captained his team to win the summer league championship. Quite a memorable victory!

Dan also had a great love for baseball. Along with season tickets for the Phillies, he enjoyed taking vacations to see American League teams. Dan had an extensive collection of baseball cards with an impressive list of one-of-a-kind cards.

Dan was a music lover. He enjoyed a variety of music and had quite a collection of albums numbering well over a thousand. He delighted in sitting down and playing the piano when he found the time. More often, though, Dan was out catching the concert greats as they came to town.

Dan spent his summers at the Jersey shore. The rest of the year, he spent his vacation time traveling. He had a passion to travel and see a variety of places.

Reflecting back on Dan's days at Bloomsburg holds special memories for us. His top priority besides "studying" was to have fun and make people happy. In a room full of people, Dan had a special glow, a sparkle that reflected on all who were touched by him.

In his behalf, the "Dan Canuso Memorial Fund" has been established through the Zeta Psi fraternity, in which Dan was an outstanding brother. The proceeds will be donated to the Leukemia Society in his memory. Anyone wishing to contribute may contact Scott and Kelly Smale (215) 327-3251 or Roh Emeri (215) 748-6505. A card will be sent to the Canuso family as contributions are made to the Leukemia Society.

We will always remember the happiness that Dan brought to us!

Fun in the Sun!

There's something for everyone in Bermuda!

Join the Bloomsburg University-Community Orchestra Sesquicentennial Celebration Cruise on the Nordic Prince, sailing from New York to Bermuda

June 18-25, 1989

If you have always wanted to go on a cruise, take advantage of this perfect opportunity to enjoy being catered to on the Nordic Prince at very reasonable rates!

A cruise is the perfect way to relax! You can choose from a variety of daily and evening activities! Or, you can just sit back and lounge your time away! You will spend four days at sea and three days in Bermuda:

WHILE YOU ARE AT SEA, you have the option to relax and soak up the sun to the tune of calypso and reggae music at poolside or participate in a variety of activities such as arts and crafts, pool games, golf putting, skeet shooting, ping pong, shuffleboard, basketball, aerobics, walking, jogging, yoga, complimentary dance lessons, horse racing, bingo, reading from many selections in the ship's library, participating in the passenger talent show, masquerade ball, and many other activities. Each evening brings you live entertainment such as Las Vegas-type shows, disco music, the big band sound, comedians and more.

WHILE YOU ARE IN BERMUDA, you are in an island paradise! You can enjoy the fun of shopping in many stores and boutiques, visit the perfume and pottery factory, walk through the quaint streets and flower-filled lanes, or take a bicycle or moped and explore the Island on your own.

If you enjoy the beach, visit one of the many white (pink) sand beaches with its crystal clear turquoise water. If the underwater world is your pleasure, there are numerous snorkeling, scuba diving and helmet diving tours available. If you prefer the night life, there are numerous restaurants as well as clubs offering entertainment from Las Vegas-type shows to limbo and calypso dancing.

FOOD, DID SOMEONE SAY FOOD? You have the option of eating several times per day! Full-course meals are served at breakfast, lunch and dinner in the restaurant. Food is also served poolside for breakfast, lunch and afternoon tea with snacks. Save yourself, too, for the midnight buffet. If you want to feel extra special, treat yourself to a continental breakfast in your cabin at no extra charge.

Why not pamper yourself! Get fellow alumni, family and friends and

Six months in a magic land

(Editor's Note: The following article about Rev. Greg Osterberg was written by Wanda Willis '88, a student intern in the Alumni Office at the time. Rev. Osterberg has since resigned his position at Bloomsburg to return to graduate school in Rochester, N.Y.)

Green. Mountainous. And too beautiful to believe.

Sound like a magic land that could only exist in a dream?

Rev. Greg Osterberg of the Protestant Campus Ministry and his family lived there for six months. In New Zealand, that is.

After corresponding for the past two years with the Rev. Harry Swalding, pastor of the Mt. Albert Presbyterian Church in Auckland, they decided to exchange ministries for the last half of 1987.

AUCKLAND, New Zealand's largest city, is nicknamed "the city of sails," according to Osterberg, because it has two harbors.

"It's a large city with small-town characteristics," he said.

Although Auckland is a safe, clean city compared to New York City or Philadelphia, New Zealanders consider it crime-ridden, according to Osterberg.

He describes New Zealanders as incredibly friendly and trusting. He recalls one incident in which his wife, Debbie, was on a bus looking at a map of the city. A university student came up to her and not only gave her directions, but took the time to walk her where she wanted to go. And this type of thing is not uncommon, he said.

"She'll be right, mate," a common phrase which means "it's okay, chill out, relax," epitomizes the New Zealanders' positive attitude about life. They come from a Scotch and British background, according to Osterberg, who describes them as "hearty, hard-working and creative."

"They tend to do everything with gusto," he said. That includes skiing, sailing and driving. "New Zealanders like to drive fast, not necessarily to get somewhere, just to drive fast."

They are a very active people, he added, as is the country itself. Geothermically, New Zealand has many hot springs, earthquakes and volcanoes. In fact, the Mt. Albert Presbyterian Church is located at the base of a long extinct volcano.

BREATHTAKING — A view of snowcapped mountains from the fiord, Milford Sound.

THE OSTERBERGS — Greg, Debbie, Adam and Erik — with the Pacific Ocean and the Kaikoura Mountains of the South Island of New Zealand in the background.

HELPING OUT — Erik helps the sheep dogs "musteer" the sheep into a pen. The 70 million sheep of New Zealand seem to be everywhere you look.

THE CHURCH'S 200 member congregation is mostly over 60 years old, as is the population of Auckland itself. This was a big change for Osterberg, who has been at BU for nine years where he is exposed to young adults most of the time.

"I enjoyed working with the church, but found myself missing the university."

Although the church is Scotch Presbyterian, which is "really structured," the congregation was friendly and open to new approaches, he said. He recalled the first time he played guitar during a church service. "They weren't really ready for it, but they asked for more."

Osterberg believes there's a fair amount of religious diversity in New Zealand. He finds the Church of the Nazarene, Church of Christ, and conservative Baptist churches are growing, while the more traditional Methodist, Presbyterian and Lutheran faiths are dwindling, as they are in the United States.

He believes "people want simple answers to complex questions in a complex world."

OSTERBERG did get a chance to work with "a handful of university students" while he was in New Zealand. He said they were similar to students in the United States in that they are "achievement-oriented and career-minded."

One difference between our higher education system and New Zealand's is that at least 40 percent of American young people go to college, but in New Zealand, less than 10 percent go, according to Osterberg.

Part of the reason for the difference may be because qualifying exams are required for New Zealand's free college education. Also, the cost of living is so high in New Zealand that people want to go to work and begin earning money as soon as possible.

"Their income is the same as ours, but the cost of living is higher," he said. The cost of living was the biggest culture shock for the Osterbergs. They were not meat-eaters, but found themselves eating beef and lamb which was cheap, while chicken and fish were very expensive.

"The best steak was cheaper than chicken," he said.

Auckland is the third most expensive city in the world in which to own a house, according to Osterberg, right behind London and New York City. And cars, which are all imported, are three times more expensive than here.

To recover from high costs and from driving on the "other" side of the road, Osterberg, 34, and his family (Debbie, 35; Adam, seven; and Erik, five) took full advantage of the hilly picturesque countryside.

Osterberg, who was involved in BU's Quest program for many years, is an avid hiker, skier and backpacker.

"I've always had a reverence for nature as a means of being connected to it and our Creator," he said.

The ALUMNI QUARTERLY

Volume 88, Number 4

Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania

Winter 1988

Heralding the Sesquicentennial

'Actions that rise out of our hearts'

(Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of three articles highlighting current university issues which have been identified as important national concerns. The first article, printed in the Fall 1988 Alumni Quarterly, explored the issue of alcohol and drug abuse on college campuses. The concluding article, to be published in the next edition of The Alumni Quarterly, will address the issue of assessment in higher education.)

AFFIRMATIVE ACTION planning and implementation remains an important priority at Bloomsburg University. Although the court order requiring Pennsylvania colleges and universities to desegregate is no longer current, much remains to be done. Affirmative action has been identified as a top priority because we believe treating every human being with dignity and respecting the worth of each individual always has been and always will be the right thing to do.

It is hard to eradicate long-held prejudices. The world around us shouts its approval of those who are thin, young, and upwardly mobile, bright, and handsome in appearance. Sometimes, the world is less than kind to those of us who might be slightly overweight, elderly, have red hair, or perhaps less hair than we had last year, or who are different than we are. In order to get past our prejudices, we need to understand ourselves better, as well as understand more about the people around us. Through greater understanding, we can grow to respect one another, to value one another, and to benefit from our relationship together.

BLOOMSBURG UNIVERSITY is a warm, caring community. However, we have not yet come to appreciate fully the many differences that exist among the people of our community. Nor have we been able to reach the degree of diversity in our population that we need if we are to effectively prepare our graduates for the multi-cultural experiences of their future. To improve this situation, we have developed a plan of action.

This past August, a writing task force was formed with representatives from the Office of the President and each vice presidential area. Members from management, staff, the three colleges of the University, whites, people of color, men and women accepted the charge to write a one-year interim affirmative action plan and a subsequent four-year plan.

The interim plan was completed in October and has been distributed to each employee of the University. Currently, all members of our community are being invited to comment on this plan through open hearings and discussion at meetings such as the Forum, the Planning and Budget Committee, the Campus-Wide Committee on Human Relations, department chairpersons, and directors. Following these campus-wide discussions, the writing task force will submit an affirmative action plan for the upcoming four years.

GETTING A PLAN IN PLACE took a lot of effort on the part of the writing task force. However, the real work, that of implementing the plan, has just begun. On November 4, 1988, I met with members of the senior management staff in order to share with them my thoughts on equity group issues and the priorities I have set for the Office of the President. Each manager at the table, 17 in all, also shared their initiatives and described activities planned in support of those initiatives. Though I cannot relay to you each of the plans presented by our university leaders, I would like to take this opportunity to share with you my Presidential Priorities.

My primary objectives are to provide leadership in the University's affirmative action efforts, to establish responsibility and accountability at all levels in our community, and to model behavior consistent with the purposes and aim of affirmative action. I will be meeting regularly with the vice presidents and other university managers to assess our progress and to redefine our plan of action.

OUR CONTINUING COMMITMENT to eliminating barriers to full participation of minorities and women in the life of the university has led, among other initiatives, to the creation of two new committees — a Commission on the Status of Women and the Committee on Protected Class Issues. The latter was first presented as a recommendation in the 1988 Middle States Self-Study Report. This committee will have several functions, but primary among them will be their involvement in on-going assessment of the university's affirmative action/diversity efforts. This committee will also serve as a collective ombudsman for concerns of protected class persons. The Commission on the Status of Women will have as their charge the identification of issues of importance to women at Bloomsburg University and will work with the community to improve the climate for all women at the University.

AUSPRICH

Library to benefit from campaign

In 1989 Bloomsburg University will be announcing its Sesquicentennial Library Campaign. Leadership from each class beginning with the Class of 1929 will be asked to "kick off" the drive for their class.

Phase I of the campaign will benefit the Harvey A. Andrus Library. Nearly $400,000, including a five-year pledge of $250,000 from the Community Government Association, has already been donated or committed toward the $1 million goal.

Phase II of the campaign will be earmarked for student scholarships, and Phase III will be used for enhancement of academic programs. Each phase will be conducted concurrently with the Annual Fund.

FUNDRAISING FOR BU is as old as the university itself. Students then, students today, and students in between — our alumni — have a deep appreciation for the university and want to help make it as strong and supportive as possible for each generation of students.

The earliest report of this outpouring for the university was related in Profile of the Past, A Living Legacy, by Eda Bessie Edwards '41:

Just two days after Institute Hall (known now as Carver Hall) was dedicated, Professor Carver commented to three students, "Well, there's the new building, and there's the tower. But there's no bell in it. Now, we have to have a bell — a good one.... Now hustle along and raise that money today for the bell. You can do it. It would cost $1,200 at least."

To the three young men this seemed like quite a job, but they accepted the challenge and started canvassing the town that very day. By evening, three tired young men had raised $1,010, enough money to buy the Menely Bell (which still hangs in Carver Tower).

THIS STORY EXEMPLIFIES the spirit of BU supporters. With your help, Bloomsburg University can look forward to its next 150 years with great expectation. More information about the new campaign will appear in future issues of The Alumni Quarterly. — Anthony Ianiero, Director of Development

Bloomsburg University is committed to providing equal educational and employment opportunities for all persons without regard to race, color, religion, sex, age, national origin, ancestry, life style, affectional or sexual preference, handicap, Vietnam era status as veterans, or union membership. The university is additionally committed to affirmative action and will take positive steps to provide such educational and employment opportunities.

IANIERO

In summation, Bloomsburg University's affirmative action plan is a pledge to become a more pluralistic community. Our efforts to assure diversity contribute enormously to the vitality of the educational experience for each of us. To achieve and maintain our distinction as a university, we must rededicate ourselves to building a campus community where the dignity and worth of every individual is respected and where the talents of all are fully developed, expressed and valued. Our affirmative action goals will be achieved when all of our good thoughts and intentions are integrated into the actions that rise out of our hearts. — Harry Ausprich, Ph.D., President

Alumni directory planned for '89

The year-long celebration of Bloomsburg University's 150th birthday is in the offing with the kickoff event occurring on January 13, 1989! More than a year's planning with a multitude of activities designed to reach alumni of all ages will celebrate the Sesquicentennial of the University. Constituencies representing every aspect of the University have planned many unique and interesting events for you throughout the year. (See calendar elsewhere in this issue.)

In keeping with the festivities, one of the services provided by the Alumni Association will be to offer you a comprehensive directory of all alumni. Soon you will be receiving a questionnaire from Carleton Graphics, a very reputable alumni directory publishing firm. The following information will be included in the directory: Name in full, designated class year and degree(s), business position, employer, business address, business telephone number, residential address and residential telephone number.

In addition to the biographical section, there will be a geographical index and a class index. A 16-page introductory section will provide information about the University and the Alumni Association. The directory will be available in softcover ($24.95) and hardcover ($34.95) plus shipping and handling.

In order for the directory to be a success, it will be important for you to complete the questionnaire that you receive early in 1989. The information you provide on the front of the questionnaire will be used in the directory, while the information on the back of the questionnaire will be used by the Alumni Office to improve programs and services. There will be no telephone solicitation to market the directory or to gather biographical information. Therefore, we are counting on you to respond promptly to the initial request for information. If you do not return the questionnaire, only your name and address will be included in the directory.

For those of you who purchased the last directory, you know how beneficial it can be to locate fellow classmates. The new directory will provide much more information than the last!

The Alumni Association is very pleased to offer the directory to you! Watch your mail! Complete the questionnaire so you, too, will be included in the most comprehensive listing of graduates ever published.

KLEMKOSKY

BE SURE TO CHECK the listing of upcoming events elsewhere in this issue. Plan now to attend as many events as possible in 1989, especially Homecoming where many nostalgic activities are being planned to recall your days on campus, regardless of your graduation year!

If you haven't visited the campus lately, this is the year you will want to return! What a perfect opportunity to visit the Fenstermaker Alumni House, too! So many of us out there are missing a heartwarming, welcoming experience! Despite the on-going changes of the physical appearance of the campus, a visit to the Fenstermaker Alumni House will provide you with a sense of belonging! It is truly your University home away from home!

We look forward to your visit in 1989! — Mary Anne Klemkosky '59, President of the Alumni Association

LINTON

Additional scholarships

Several scholarships have been awarded to BU students in addition to those announced in the last issue of The Alumni Quarterly.

Recipient of the Angelo Scheno Scholarship for 1988 is George H. Reid Jr., a business major from Montgomery, Pa. This $500 scholarship is presented in memory of Mr. Scheno, a 1952 graduate, by his sister-in-law, Mary Betterly Maiers '33 and her husband, A. Kenneth Maiers. (Mr. Reid was not available for a photograph.)

Recipient of this year's $100 scholarship provided by the Philadelphia Chapter of BU Alumni is Carolyn J. Dent, a sophomore business administration major from Norwood.

Recipient of the 1988 Lamar Blass Memorial Athletic Grant of $300 is Bruce Linton, a junior radiologic technology major from Catasauqua. (His photo was not available for the last issue.)

MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP — Harry Jenkins (right), a former Bloomsburg student whose college career was interrupted by World War II, has given the university $10,500 to establish a scholarship in memory of his wife, Lydia Repella Jenkins, a member of the Class of 1943. The $500 per semester scholarship is earmarked for a student from Luzerne or Lackawanna County. The recipient must have a cumulative grade point average of at least 2.75 and must have financial need. Accompanying Mr. Jenkins to Bloomsburg to present the gift was his son, Don, named for Mr. Jenkins' brother who attended Bloomsburg and was killed during World War II. Mr. Jenkins, a retired lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Air Force, resides in Irmo, S.C.

NEW SCHOLARSHIP — Francis "Doc" Sell '35, a member of the BU Alumni Board of Directors, has provided $10,000 to establish a scholarship fund in memory of Dorothy Q. and Lloyd S. Wantman. Interest income will be used to provide two equal scholarships to

$10,000 for wrestling

BU's Division I wrestling program has received "a shot in the arm" with a $10,000 gift from George Zanias of Johnstown, developer of the new Columbia Mall near Buckhorn. The gift was announced by Anthony Janiero, BU director of development.

"It's one of the largest gifts for a single sport in the history of the university," said Janiero. "We are very grateful to the Zanias family."

Daniel Zanias, son of the developer and vice president of the company, said he became interested in the Bloomsburg wrestling program while serving as a coach for the Free Style Junior National Wrestling Program in Pennsylvania.

"During the summers, I had several Bloomsburg wrestlers in the program. I was impressed with the calibre of wrestlers attending BU and the fact that a school of its size was in NCAA Division I wrestling and making a good showing. This, coupled with the family's love of the sport, prompted the gift to the university," Zanias said.

Head wrestling coach Roger Sanders said the full amount of the gift will go toward recruiting student athletes and will be utilized over several years. "We're very appreciative of the gift. We feel it is a testimony to the success and commitment of our wrestling program. It will put us in a position to upgrade our program even more."

In recent months, members of the Zanias family have become more familiar with the university and the community due to frequent trips to the Columbia Mall which opened in October.

Plans unveiled for Veterans' Memorial

In late 1984, an alumnus recommended to the Alumni Association that posthumous Distinguished Service Awards be made to the 26 men and one woman graduates or former students who lost their lives in World War II. A committee was appointed to consider this recommendation. A proposal was made to both the board of directors and the Alumni Association at its annual meeting on June 14, 1985, for a more tangible and permanent memorial to honor all who made the supreme sacrifice and to recognize those who have served in the Armed Services to preserve our way of life.

WAGNER

At this same time, the Association was negotiating the purchase of what is now the Fenstemaker Alumni House. With the purchase consummated, it was deemed appropriate that the project be held in abeyance pending the financing of the Alumni House. The gifts of a generous alumni made that dream a reality!

The Veterans Memorial/Recognition Committee was reactivated earlier this year, and the board of directors approved their plan for the project on November 12, 1988. The project will consist of three parts:

PART 1. A veterans memorial garden on the lawn of the Fenstemaker Alumni House. It will surround the flag pole erected in 1987, a generous gift of the Class of 1963. A flower bed surrounds the flag pole base and will remain intact. The garden will be expanded to include five benches and a dedicatory plaque on a stone wall.

The dedicatory statement will be introduced by a response made by General of the Army Omar N. Bradley when asked what freedom meant to him. He replied, "Freedom — no word was ever spoken that has held out greater hope, demanded greater sacrifice, needed more to be nurtured, blessed more the giver, damned more its destroyer or come closer to being God's will on earth." An appropriate addendum to this introduction is in the process of being finalized.

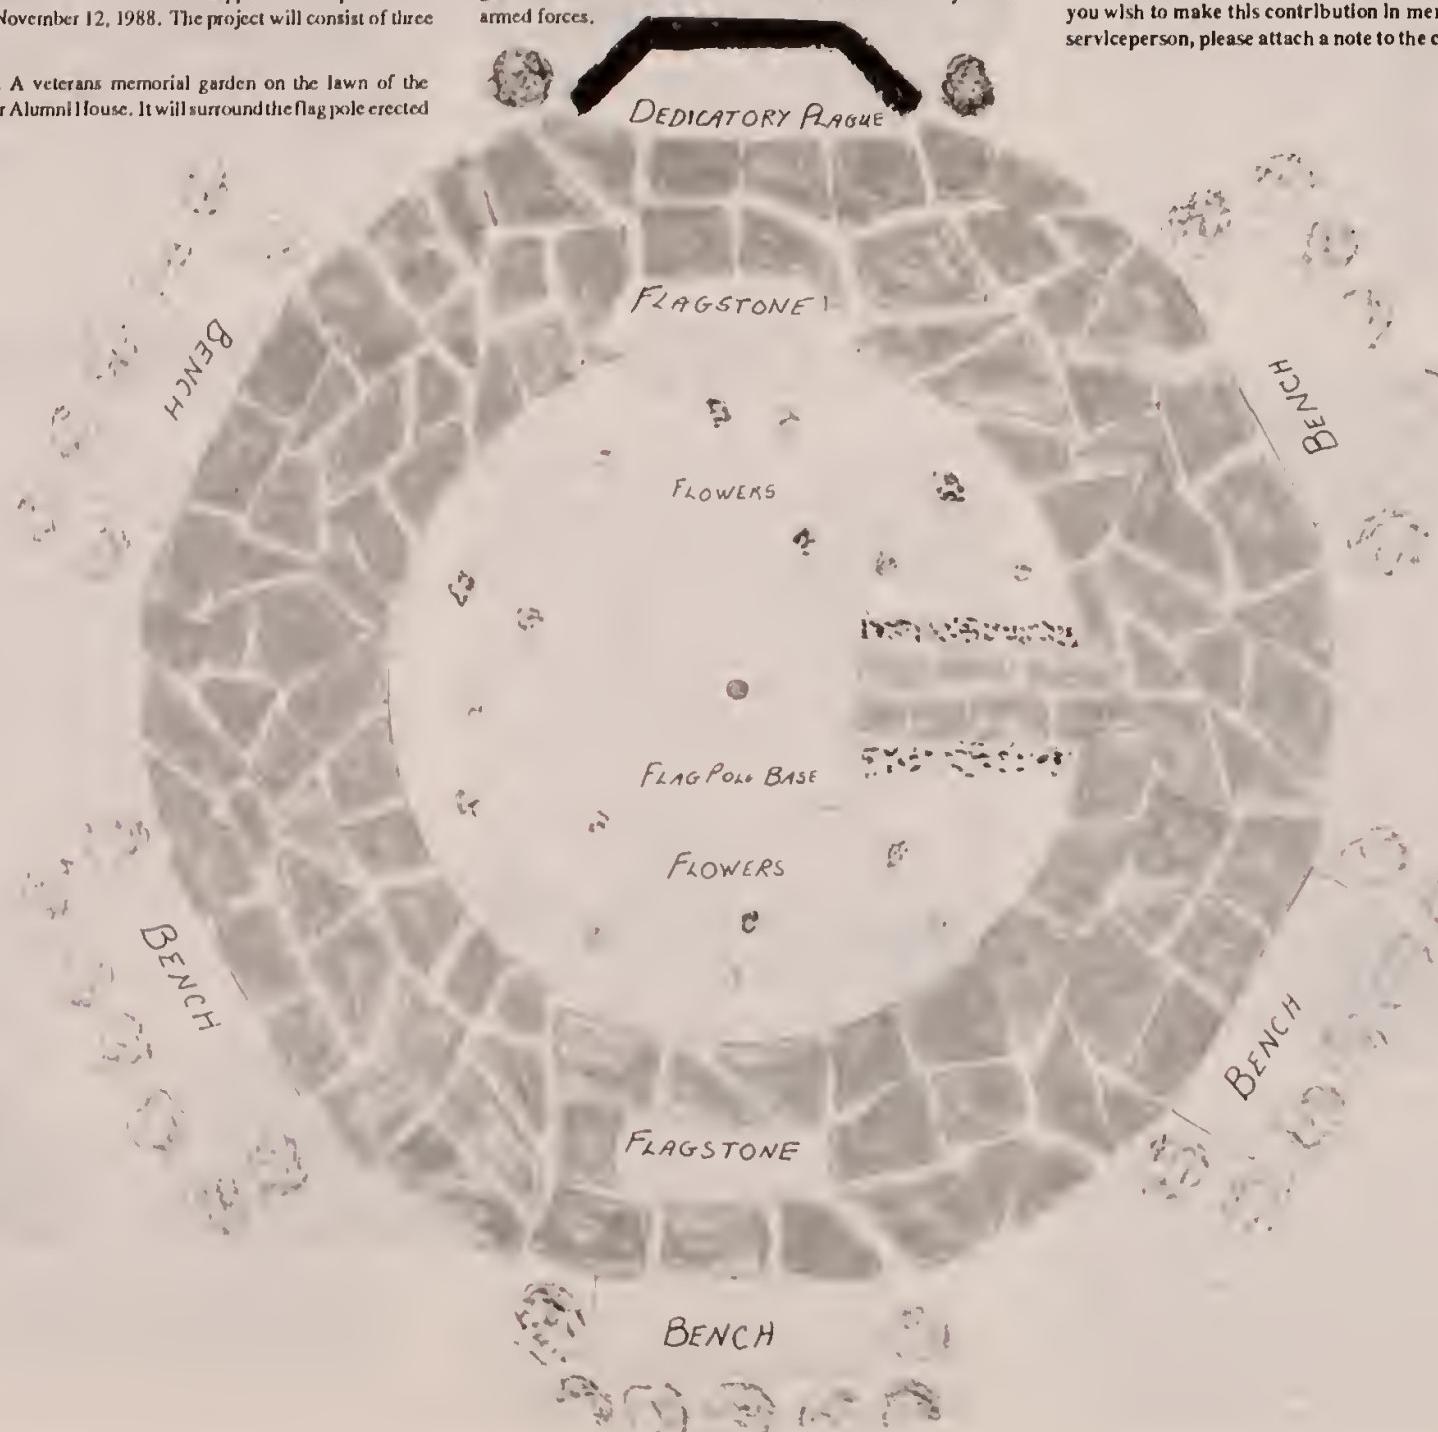

PART 2. Except for World Wars I and II, little information is available about contributions by Bloomsburg's sons and daughters to national defense. Therefore, we will attempt to gather biographical information on all graduates and former students who have served on active duty from the founding date of Bloomsburg University. This will be an ongoing project, and we will have to rely on alumni for input. This information will appear in two volumes: Volume I will be Books of Valor honoring those who lost their lives in combat, those who lost their lives while serving on active duty, and those awarded the Purple Heart. Volume II, Books of Service, will contain information on all graduates and former students who served on active duty in the armed forces.

PART 3. This part of the project is to establish a living memorial in the form of a scholarship. Eligibility for the scholarship, in order of priority, will be: (1) a child of a deceased veteran, (2) a child of a disabled veteran, (3) a child of a holder of the Purple Heart, and (4) a child of a veteran.

The garden will be dedicated at Homecoming 1989 as one event during the observance of the sesquicentennial of Bloomsburg University. In the interim, the committee will finalize a form to collect the biographical data for Part II of the project. Part III, the scholarship, will be dependent upon successful fundraising.

With the limited funds presently available, the stone and dedicatory plaque can probably be funded. Funds are needed for the benches, shrubbery, flowers, flagstone and lighting. The board of directors solicits the assistance of all alumni; especially those who served in the Armed Forces, to bring this project to fruition. — Elwood M. Eight inducted into Hall of Fame

Seven alumni and a former coach/athletic administrator became the newest members of the Bloomsburg University Athletic Hall of Fame on September 23. The inductees were honored at a reception and banquet held at the Sheraton Danville Inn.

The inductees were Thomas Donan '49, Frank Golder '31, Elfed "Vid" Jones '30, Walter "Whitey" McCloskey '44, Jan Prosseda '66, Francis "Doc" Sell '35, John J. "Bloody" Sircovics '39 and Eleanor Wray.

Thomas Donan '49

Donan was considered one of the premier linemen in Pennsylvania college football during his time as a player for the Huskies. He served as team captain in 1948, and that season was named to the Associated Press All-Pennsylvania football first team. His selection to that unit was especially impressive due to the fact that there was no distinction between levels, and he was named to the squad with such notables as Elwood Petchel and Fran Rogel, both of Penn State, Chuck Bednarick of the University of Pennsylvania, Villanova's Bill Doherty and Pitt's Bill McPeak.

He was also an All-Pennsylvania Conference choice and was named third team Little All-American. During his three seasons with the club, the Huskies had an overall record of 19-5-1 and registered one of the school's two undefeated campaigns. In 1949, he was invited to a tryout with the Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Football League.

After leaving Bloomsburg, he spent 34 years teaching and coaching in the Lancaster area at Columbia and Solanco high schools. He was head football coach at Columbia for eight seasons and led his teams to two conference titles and an overall record of 44-29-4.

Frank Golder '31

Golder performed for the baseball and basketball teams, earning multiple letters in both, and was considered one of the university's most outstanding athletes and finest all-time players in the latter sport. During his career with the basketball program, the Huskies compiled a fine 43-13 mark, including a 12-1 record in 1930-1931.

Following his graduation, Golder joined the teaching and coaching staff at Hughesville High School, while earning his master's degree at Columbia University. His teams won two West Branch League titles at Hughesville. He moved to Bloomsburg High School in 1937 and was named head basketball coach. In 19 seasons in charge of the program, the squads won 10 Susquehanna Valley League crowns and, during one three-year stretch, 40 consecutive league games. The Panthers also captured four District Four championships.

Golder was responsible for the start of Little League Baseball in Bloomsburg in the late 1940s. He also started baseball at the high school and was the team's coach for seven years. For 13 years, Golder was a member of the PIAA District Four board of directors and was the organization's chairman for three years. He retired in 1975, having served as high school principal for the final 14 years.

Elfed Jones '30

Jones served in many capacities with four teams as both a player and coach. He was an assistant football coach from 1926 to 1929 in charge of the offensive line for those four seasons, but also played fullback for the Huskies. From 1926 to 1930, he was also the university's junior varsity basketball coach and the track and field coach.

He, along with Shorty Edmunds, was responsible for introducing wrestling to the campus, and both were members of the university's first team in the sport in the 1928-1929 season. While at Bloomsburg, he also served as assistant to the dean of men.

After graduation, he was named to a teaching position as well as head basketball and track and field coach at Nanticoke High School. He served there from 1931 to 1937 before moving to J. M. Coughlin High School in Wilkes-Barre as teacher and coach until 1945. He was a PIAA official in football for 20 years.

He eventually moved into school administration and served as principal at the elementary level in Wilkes-Barre and Bloomsburg. He retired as elementary supervising principal of the Central Columbia School District.

Over the years, he also taught courses for both Bloomsburg and

1988 'FAME' INDUCTEES — This year's inductees to the BU Athletic Hall of Fame were Elfed Jones '30, Frank Golder '31, Thomas Donan '49, Francis Sell '35, Jan Prosseda '66, the late John J. Sircovics '39 (represented by his widow), Walter McCloskey '44, and the late Eleanor Wray (represented by a niece, Lyn Rudnitsky).

Penn State universities. He had several articles published in educational periodicals, and he served on a committee for the Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction.

Walter McCloskey '44

McCloskey earned 11 letters, including four in basketball, four in football and three in baseball, as an undergraduate at Bloomsburg. He served as captain of the basketball and baseball squads for two seasons each. After graduation, he had a brief stint in the Pennsylvania State Professional Basketball League and played baseball in the American Legion and Tri-County leagues.

He joined the staff of the Danville School District and is still a member of the guidance department. He was the head basketball coach for 21 seasons from 1952 to 1974, compiling a record of 350-183, and his teams won nine Susquehanna Valley League championships and two District Four titles. His 1962-1963 unit reached the PIAA Eastern semifinals, and his 1971-1972 squad advanced to the quarterfinals before being eliminated. One of his distinctions as a coach was that he never cut a player.

He was also an assistant football coach and track and field starter for the Ironmen for 25 years and started intramural leagues at the school. McCloskey was in charge of the Washies Play-ground program for 33 years and administered several summer camps for football and basketball. He was a PIAA basketball official and, along with former BU coach Earl Voss, started the Pennsylvania Basketball Coaches Association.

Jan Prosseda '66

Prosseda was a six-time Pennsylvania Conference champion in track and field and cross country. He never lost a race in high school or college competition, compiling an individual record of 76-0 in the half-mile, mile and two-mile events, as well as cross country meets. He established several Bloomsburg and opponent course records and placed second in the NCAA championship three-mile run in 1965, losing by one second and missing the national record by two seconds. The previous year, he competed in the Olympic trials in the 5,000 meters.

In 1984, he gained All-American masters status, presented to runners over 40 years of age, giving him the honor of being the first and only American, including all former Olympians, to attain both collegiate and masters All-American status. That same year, he also ran national age-group record times in the one, two and three-mile runs. In addition, his time in the 5,000 meters was the fifth fastest masters time in the world. The following year, he was the only American qualifier in the 3,000 meter steeplechase for the World Masters Championships and turned in the 10th-best time.

A teacher in the Harrisburg School District, he is the only runner to win his age group in the Harrisburg Mile, Capitol 5,000, Kipona 10,000, and Harrisburg National Marathon.

Francis Sell '35

Sell earned seven letters in track and field and cross country. He won the 880 yard race in the 1935 Pennsylvania Conference Championships in record time, which is believed to be the university's first individual running title. He served as captain of the cross country team in his sophomore season and earned the same honor as a senior in track and field. In cross country, he was among the place winners in every race in which he competed over the three-year period.

He taught at Kutztown High School for two years following graduation and was coach of junior high basketball and varsity track and field programs. He also initiated the sport of cross country at the school. In 1937 he moved to Boyertown High School, where he spent 35 years as a teacher and coach. He organized the cross country program and coached that sport, as well as the track and field team, for the next 20 years.

During his coaching tenure, he coached individuals to seven state high school championships in cross country and track and field. He also had a team win the medley relay title at the Penn Relays. He organized the Venzeke Relay Carnival in Boyertown in 1939, an event which is still held annually.

John J. Sircovics '39

Sircovics was Bloomsburg's first All-American football player, being selected for honorable mention honors in 1937. He was also named to the All East football unit that season. He was a four-year starter and served as the team's captain in 1936.

After graduation, he played in a semi-professional football league. Prior to attending college, he was an all-conference center at Berwick High School. He earned the nickname "Bloody" due to his tenacity on the football field and carried the name throughout his lifetime.

He was employed as attendance officer for many years in the Berwick School District and was assistant football coach from 1949 to 1967. He served as assistant football coach at Hazleton High School from 1968 to 1973. He helped organize the Berwick Athletic Booster Association which coordinated Little League

From dismissal to dean's list

Following the 1984-1985 academic year, Bloomsburg University football player Ron Sahn received an academic dismissal notice from the university. The notice was his second based on a grade point average that did not meet the university's required standards following two years of study.

Now, three years later, as Sahn prepares for his graduation in December, he will not only close his collegiate football career with a degree in hand but could achieve one of the highest honors accorded a college athlete. The senior defensive back's name has been placed in nomination for a spot on the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) Academic All-American Football Team.

Since his return to the university, the Williamsport, Pa., native has rebuilt a grade point average of 3.61 while performing as a member of the football team that posted a 7-4 record this year and boasted a national ranking throughout most of the season.

"I just wasn't realistic when I first came to Bloomsburg," says Sahn. "I had my mind made up that college was supposed to be fun and a lot easier than high school. Football was very important, and the social life was great, so when people who cared about me tried to get me to put things in the proper perspective, I just didn't believe them. I did what I had to in high school and thought I could get by here, too."

UPON RECEIVING his first dismissal notice at the end of his initial year at the university, Sahn appealed the decision to the academic review board and was reinstated based on the fact that his course load as a freshman was considered to be one of the more difficult programs. A condition of his reinstatement was that his cumulative average had to improve dramatically by the end of his sophomore year to meet the standards established by university policy.

"It got my attention, but even though I made changes, they turned out to be not enough," said Sahn. "I tried to cut down the number of credits so there wasn't as much work, but one of the crazy things I did was continue to take some of the tougher classes. My second semester grades that year were really not that bad, but I was in such a hole it just wasn't good enough."

NOT GOOD ENOUGH meant a second dismissal notice and no possibility of returning to Bloomsburg for the following academic year.

"Probably the thing that hurt me most was telling my dad. He had received letters from schools to play football and never went, so when the opportunity came for me, he was thrilled just to see me go, and I really think happier than I was about it. Still, even after the second time I was dismissed, I didn't think it was over." Sahn returned home and took a job with the Williamsport Recreation Commission and worked at the Little League World Series. He also earned certification as a football official and worked some junior high and varsity football games the following fall. Returning to school, however, was his intention, so Sahn talked to Ron DiGiandomenico, BU's coordinator of academic advisement. Sahn took DiGiandomenico's advice and enrolled in two courses in the spring semester of 1986 at Williamsport Area Community College.

"I wanted to get back in school, preferably at Bloomsburg, so I could really prove it to myself. After I got A's in both courses, I knew I could do it, especially because I was working 40 hours a week and going to school."

He reapplied to Bloomsburg and was granted permission for the fall of 1986, but with a different goal in mind — teaching.

"The chance to work with so many kids was a real plus for me at a time when I wasn't sure what was ahead of me. When I got another chance, I knew what I wanted to do, and I wasn't going to screw up again."

A NEW ATTITUDE and a new goal was all that he needed. His efforts were evident in the first semester back with three A's and a pair of B's on his transcript. A spot on the Dean's List on three occasions since his return is more proof that his priorities have been realigned.

Sahn was also part of the Huskies' defensive unit that spent much of the season among the nation's leaders in scoring and rushing defenses. In addition, he was an integral part of the squad's special teams unit. He finished among the defensive point leaders this season, and in the season finale against the University of New Haven, he blocked a punt for the fourth time in his career.

"I think I'm a better person now, and a lot of things have contributed to that, including football. Sahn also credits his close relationship with South Williamsport native Josie Beasom, an August elementary education graduate at BU, as one of the main reasons for his growth as a person.

"She was there when everybody, including me, had doubts. The confidence she showed in me was constant, and I've learned from it. Bloomsburg helped in that respect, too. The atmosphere here allows you to be a complete person. If you can't find someone — a professor, a coach or a friend — to get to know, then I just don't think you're trying."

He first attended Bloomsburg in 1983 to play football. In December he will graduate with a degree in elementary education, and, oh yes, he played football too. Being nominated for the CoSIDA Academic All-American Football Team is an honor student athletes earn. Ron Sahn has already earned that distinction and could go one step further by being selected to the team when the final voting is announced in January. But, more importantly, he proved a lot of things to himself.

Sports wrap-up

The field hockey team finished as the NCAA Division III national runnerup, and the football team posted its fifth consecutive winning campaign as the 1988 fall sports season came to a close in November.

Coach Jan Hutchinson's team made its eighth straight appearance in the championship round of the national tournament and fell just short of the school's fifth national crown in field hockey as homestanding Trenton State handed the Huskies a 3-2 setback in double overtime. The loss ended the club's season at 22-2-1.

The season included the Huskies defending their Pennsylvania Conference title and three wins in the national tournament enroute to the championship game. Only three seniors were listed on this season's roster, and junior Shuron Reilly was the club's top scorer. Reilly had 18 goals and six assists followed by senior Cindy Hurst with 13 goals and four assists. Sophomore Susie Slocum added 10 goals and six assists, and junior Daneen Fiero had nine goals and six assists.

DESPITE LOSING its last three games of the season, the football team posted another winning record, the school's fifth in a row, with a mark of 7-4. The Huskies started the season with a four-game winning streak before dropping a game at West Chester. Three more wins would lift the club's record to 7-1, but offensive struggles, something that plagued the squad throughout the season, caught up with the Huskies, and they lost the season's final three games.

Senior Leonard Blitt led the team in rushing with 627 yards and six touchdowns despite missing the last four games due to a fractured ankle. Senior Paul Venesky, playing his first full season, threw for 1,187 yards and four touchdowns.

However, it was the Huskies' defensive unit that shined throughout the season led by All-American candidate Joshua Lee. The tackle set a single-season record with 11 quarterback sacks and was second on the club with 84 tackles. Another senior on the veteran-laden team, linebacker Wade Pickett, was the top tackler with 87. Senior Dan Shinn and sophomore Trent Dennis tied for the club lead in interceptions with five each.

THE SOCCER team also displayed a strong defense but had trouble scoring goals at times and closed the season with a 4-10-4 record. The strength of the Huskies' defense was evidenced by the fact that the squad scored only 19 goals in the 28 games but played in eight overtime games, including a 0-0 tie with eventual

Alumni have opportunity to support the arts of BU

"National Juried Small Works on Paper," an art exhibition organized by the Bloomsburg University Art Department, is scheduled for the Haas Gallery from October 8 through November 10, 1989. The show will include a variety of media on paper, including drawings, watercolor and collage.

Alumni interested in supporting the arts at BU are encouraged to make a contribution toward the purchase of one of these works for the University's permanent collection. Contact Doug Huppenstiel, director of alumni affairs, at the Fenstermaker Alumni House, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815.

and Teener League baseball and midget football activities. He also coached Little League baseball and midget football for many years. He served with the U.S. Army and National Guard for 21 years.

Sircovics died in 1987. The award was accepted by his widow and his son, John Jr.

Eleanor Wray

This long-time teacher and coach, who died in 1985, became the first woman inducted into the Hall of Fame. Her career as an educator spanned 30 years, including 20 years on Bloomsburg's health and physical education faculty, before retiring in 1977. She served in many capacities, including women's intramural director and adviser to the "B" Club. She helped initiate and organize varsity teams in field hockey and basketball. With the introduction of swimming and diving and tennis as varsity sports in 1972, she was named coordinator of women's intercollegiate athletics and was the Huskies' women's tennis coach from 1973 to 1977.

The university's annual "Outstanding Senior Female Athlete Award" is named in her honor. She also served with the U.S. Army Special Services as a recreational director in Germany.

Her award was accepted by a niece, Lyn Rudnitsky.

Nominations sought

The Bloomsburg University Athletic Hall of Fame has grown to 21 members with the September inductions of eight former athletes and coaches. Receiving the university's highest athletic honor is something these people will cherish forever.

There are many more deserving people who should be honored by induction into the hall. Nominations are being sought for next fall's induction ceremonies and may come from any source, providing the nominee meets the following criteria.

A candidate for induction must have participated in at least two full seasons of varsity intercollegiate competition at Bloomsburg. A person may be inducted 10 years after receiving his or her bachelor's degree from Bloomsburg or another accredited institution. A person may not be inducted into the Hall of Fame without a degree unless a majority vote of the Hall of Fame committee determines the person did not graduate "due to extenuating circumstances."

Nominations may also include Bloomsburg alumni who have made outstanding contributions or offered extraordinary service to athletics at Bloomsburg while undergraduates or after graduation. Nominations may also include coaches or other athletic personnel who have made outstanding contributions or offered extraordinary service to Bloomsburg athletics.

Persons may be nominated who attended Bloomsburg but did not play or coach, or who had very limited athletic careers, but went on to achieve success in athletics as a coach at another university, as a coach or player in professional sports, or as an administrator in college or professional athletics.

All nominations should be submitted in writing no later than March 15, 1989, to Jim Hollister, Sports Information Director, Waller Administration Building, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815.

Student chooses BU from 16

Brian Ralph of Skaneateles, N.Y., probably made a more thorough investigation of colleges and universities than any other freshman student admitted to Bloomsburg University this fall. With his father, Richard, he visited 16 well-known colleges and universities in New York and Pennsylvania before selecting BU to pursue his business career.

The Ralphs had friends including two college presidents, professors and deans from colleges and universities in the New York area advising them and assisting them in selecting a college. They first learned about Bloomsburg's business offerings from two of the professors who were BU graduates and from newspaper articles and information on the soon-to-be published book entitled "How to get an Ivy League Education at a State School" that had some good things to say about Bloomsburg.

"We knew the type of school and program we were looking for," Brian's father said. "It was a college with an enrollment of 2,000 to 7,000 students in a pleasant atmosphere with a well-rounded business program including computer programming. We wanted to check all facts and figures in depth. In fact, we developed a several-page questionnaire that included such things as friendliness of students and faculty, class size, rating of business and computer programs, instructors rank and placement of graduates."

"We were looking for professors whose main priority was teaching and not publishing. Reasonable class size was important, too, as some of the colleges we visited had undergraduate classes as large as 100 to 200 students in which it's impossible to get any kind of individual attention."

"Another strong factor considered was how clean and attractive the campus and buildings were, including the on-campus living conditions. As Brian was on his high school golf team, we were interested in a school with golf program under an experienced coach. Very importantly, Brian also wanted to pick a school that would provide that high calibre of education that provides for admission to grad school or a better-than-average employment opportunity in the business world upon graduation."

"BRIAN HAD SAT SCORES of nearly 1200 and carried a 90 average in his high school academic work," said Katherine Mulka, admissions counselor. "He was a very personable young man with a fine background. That kind of student adds to the university's prestige."

"I told Brian that from a financial standpoint, he could select any one of the 16 private and state educational facilities we visited," his father said.

"I narrowed my choices down to Bloomsburg and the University of Scranton," Brian noted. "Both have excellent business and computer programs, and both had the most pluses in the questionnaire we filled out. Although I heard Scranton had a better national recognition in its business program, I chose Bloomsburg because of the quality of the program, the friendliness of the university personnel and the openness of professors we encountered on several visits to campus. I was particularly impressed that on one of our visits to Bloomsburg, when there weren't any admissions people available, Jack Mulka, dean of student development, took the time to meet with us and show us around."

RICHARD RALPH II is a senior vice president, financial consultant and certified financial planner with Shearson Lehman Hutton, Inc., of Syracuse. He noted that, in addition to the Mulkas and professors and students they spoke with, other people showing a sincere interest in their welfare at BU included golf coach George Skomsky, athletic director Mary Gardner, and former business college dean Jack Ditrich, along with Dick Benesfield of the Board of Governors of the State System of Higher Education.

The elder Ralph says that BU has many great things to offer students, and people beyond its present service area should learn what a fine academic institution it is. Not enough people know about Bloomsburg University, he said.

MINI-REUNION — In February 1988, four classmates from the BSTC war years met in Jensen Beach, Florida, for a second annual "spur-of-the-moment luncheon and gabfest." The classmates are (from left) Lucille Martino Gilda '45, Marilyn Sailor Jackson '45, Joanne Koller Eploy '45 and Martha Stitzel Schappell '46. Marilyn and Martha are permanent residents of the Treasure Coast area, while Joanne and Lucille are annual winter visitors. They expect to meet again this year in mid-February and urge others from the mid-forties classes to join them if they are in Florida at that time. Contact Marilyn Sailor Jackson for more information: 7915 S. E. Trenton Ave., Hobo Sound, FL 33455. Telephone (407) 546-5721.

Retired professor dies; known for flag programs

Warren L. Johnson, 74, professor emeritus at Bloomsburg University, died September 7 at his home in Bloomsburg. He retired in 1977 after 25 years with the department of elementary education and early childhood education.

He was department chairman for four years, and he served as president of the faculty association for one term.

Before coming to Bloomsburg, he was the music supervisor at Richhill Township School District in Greene County and the Columbia (Pa.) School District. He also was an elementary principal at Columbia for two years.

A native of Bangor, he earned his bachelor's degree in music education at West Chester and his master's degree at Penn State. He also did additional graduate work at Millersville, Syracuse University, and Heidelberg University at Baden-Wurtemberg, Germany.

During World War II he served with the U.S. Army and achieved the rank of second lieutenant. He was awarded the Combat Infantry Badge, two Bronze Stars and the Purple Heart while serving with the Fifth Armored Division in Europe.

In 1976 he was nominated for the George Washington Award of the Freedom's Foundation at Valley Forge in recognition of the patriotic flag shows he presented to various organizations. He continued to present these programs until he became ill several months ago.

He was well-known for his copyrighted cartoons titled "Doggone Original," and for his choral compositions performed by several area church choirs.

His first wife, Martha Mary Mylin, died August 18, 1966. Surviving are his wife of 19 years, the former Maurita P. Hughes; a son, Craig A.; and two grandsons.

Two plan retirement

The retirements of BU faculty members George W. Neel and John F. Cook Jr., effective May 20, 1989, were announced at a recent meeting of the Council of Trustees.

Neel, an associate professor of languages and cultures, came to Bloomsburg in September 1964. He will complete 30 years in the field of education, 25 of which were at BU.

Cook came to Bloomsburg in 1974 as an assistant professor of art and will complete 15 years of service to the university. He will have a total of 20 years in the field of education.

Needed: New bird house

The newly-painted Fenstermaker Alumni House has received rave reviews, but the large martin bird house in the backyard didn't fare so well. When it was taken down for inspection, it was determined that it was past rehabilitation.

So if there are any alumni carpenters out there who would like to build a replacement — perhaps in the shape of the Alumni House(?) — please get in touch with Doug Hippert, director of alumni affairs.

Alumni recruiters return

Many HU alumni returned to campus this fall as recruiters for their firms, according to Carol Barnett, assistant director of Career Development and Placement. They included:

KEN KRICK '79, Peat Marwick, Main; SUE ABELL '87, Peat Marwick, Main; SUE WENRICH '87, Peat Marwick, Main; KERRY LENDER '88, Peat Marwick, Main; DAVID ZINKLER '80, Beard & Co.; BOYD KREGLOW '86, Beard & Co.; RANDY SANSENIG '77, Miller & Miller; MICHELLE SNYDER '88, Ernst & Whitney; STEVE FETTERMAN '88, Ernst & Whitney; TOM DEDICUE '87, Amp, Inc.; JIM LEGAULT '79, Shell Oil; ANTHONY CREAMER '76, Arthur Andersen; CYNTHIA CANTAGALLO '88, Arthur Andersen; NANCY ELMO '82, Shared Medical Systems; COLLEEN MCNAULIFFE '84, Laventhal & Horwath; BILL SYPAWKA '83, Unisys, Inc.; DENNIS URFER '74, Resnick, Amsterdam & Leshner; JIM RITCHIE '85, Financial Alternatives; JOE CANNAVO '87, Ingersoll Rand; DREW HOSTETTER '76, Equitable Bank; JOE DIGIACOMO '75, Loch, DiGiacomo & Eisenbaumer; SUE MORRALL '85, State Farm Insurance; BILL SNYDER '57, Radio Shack; MIKE BOGUSKI '85, Aetna Casualty Assurance; DAVID MORGANICK '77, Liberty Mutual Insurance; JOHN MARKS '88, Coopers & Lybrand.

Parents buy books

Six hundred sixty three recently published books have been purchased through the 1988 Parents' Book Fund Campaign. The new acquisitions were purchased from funds totalling more than $21,000. They were recommended for undergraduate collections by Choice, the review journal of the Association of College and Research Libraries.

The books were displayed in Andruss Library during October.

"Thanks to these gifts, the 'margin of excellence' that we seek for Bloomsburg University is a continuing reality for our students," said Daniel Vann, director of library services.

Professors, students aid production at two local companies

BU professors Paul Hartung and Dennis Huthnance and their math and computer science students are using computer calculations to help two local industries convert junk and steel into railroad car feeders and similar machined products.

The project, funded by a $75,000 grant, is one of three Ben Franklin grants totalling $210,000 in which faculty and students in the mathematics and computer science department are involved.

The process begins at the S&B Foundry on Route 11 between Bloomsburg and Berwick, where junk iron and steel are melted in a furnace and poured into a sand casting. The resulting hardened metal then becomes an unfinished cast metal part. The metal part is then taken to Columbia Precision Machining in Bloomsburg, where numerically controlled lathes and milling machines convert it to a precisioned machine part.

THE KEY EQUIPMENT used in the project to assist the operators of the milling machines and lathes is a PC-based computer-aided manufacturing CAM system called Smart Cam, according to Hartung.

"In Smart Cam, the user can draw the desired tool path on the computer screen, and the computer generates a numerical control code," Hartung said. "The main problem with the system is compatibility with specific milling machines and lathes. The translators, or post-processors, are being written by BU students."

Two of the students involved in the project are Bern McCarty, a computer science major, and Lee Chasen, a mathematics major. They have been converting computer graphic information into a numerical control (NC) format, understandable by the machining tools.

"Today's desktop computers such as PC 386 and Macintosh II have the computing power of mainframe computers of 15 years ago at a fraction of the cost. These desktop computers have advantages of better user interface, lower cost and less space requirements of larger computers. Both Professor Huthnance and I see a bright future in desktop computing for many companies except those with extremely large databases, such as insurance companies," Hartung said.

ROGER KISHIBAUGH, plant manager at CPM, is largely responsible for the success of the joint project between BU and CPM, Hartung noted. "Roger's experience with machining and writing NC instructions by hand have been essential to the computerization of the project. His knowledge of the machining process, coupled with computer experience from BU, has provided our students with practical industrial training while advancing the abilities of his company. It's a project that is mutually beneficial to the university, CPM, and S&B Foundry," Hartung said.

The purpose of this Ben Franklin Partnership Grant, of which the funding is shared by the companies involved and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, is to increase employment through the use of high technology, according to Hartung. "It's apparently accomplishing the purpose as the projected number of new jobs over the next three years at CPM and S&B is ten," he said.

DeMelfi in development office

Joe DeMelfi has been named assistant director of development for athletics on a one-year appointment, according to Anthony Ianiero, director of development. He replaces Tom Calder, who resigned to accept the position of assistant athletic director at Johns Hopkins University.

DeMelfi is responsible for athletic fundraising activities, including those of the 1000-member Husky Club. The club, which was initiated in 1974, is part of the Bloomsburg University Foundation, Inc., and received gifts totalling almost $100,000 last year.

He works with Ianiero and Mary Gardner, director of athletics, in helping to provide scholarship aid to many of the university's more than 550 athletes.

DeMelfi has been a member of the Bloomsburg staff for 13 years, serving as assistant director of admissions and assistant dean of extended programs.

'RECRUITER OF YEAR' — Bernie Donagan '63 (right) was recognized as 'Alumni Recruiter of the Year' in recognition of his outstanding service in representing BU at college night programs in New Jersey during 1988. The award was presented during the annual training session at the home of Dick Lloyd '62 (center). Conducting the training session was Jim Christy (left), director of admissions at BU.

(Editor's Note: The following letter was received from Jim Pessley, Class of 1980.)

I'm writing to let you in on a small miracle that happened between a fellow alumnus and myself which really proves that we do stick together.

I moved to Allentown over six and a half years ago. Shortly thereafter my college ring disappeared. After searching in vain, I came to the conclusion that it was gone forever.

Of course, I could have ordered a new ring, but this one was quite special. Not only was it a graduation gift from my parents, but it was also one of the last Bloomsburg State College rings (not Bloomsburg University).

Imagine my surprise a few weeks ago when I received a letter from Tom Beveridge, Class of 1973. Now an assistant principal at Lengel Middle School in Pottsville, Tom had an altercation with a student, and guess what fell out of the student's book bag! My ring!

How it got to Pottsville after all these years will remain a mystery, and how lucky it was the student had the ring with him that day.

Not only did Tom retrieve the ring and send it to me, he also asked for no reimbursement for the insured postage, after having spent several weeks trying to locate me.

BU REPRESENTATIVES — BU alumni represented the university at nearly 40 college night programs in New Jersey this year. Attending a training session in September were (seated) Carol Hurmas '81, Teresa Sandora '82, Joyce Housler '61, Linda Schmicker '76; (standing) Sandy Williams '66, Jim Christy, director of admissions; Nelson Swarts '63, Richard Stout '49, Dick Lloyd '62, Jay Hurst '65, Donald Nieman '74, Paul Manko '60, and Bernie Donagan '63.

Alumni tell BU story at college nights

A virtual "army" of BU alumni volunteers served as ambassadors this fall at college night programs in New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware. By contributing at least one night — and sometimes several — these alumni extended the capability of the BU admissions office to reach potential students in those states.

The New Jersey student recruitment program, in its 10th year, is coordinated by Dick Lloyd '62 of Helle Mead. Dick is also a member of the Alumni Board of Directors. Helping him this year were the following:

Debra J. Anderson '82, Vineland; Denise Antolik '83, Somers Point; Mike Blake '83, Hightstown; Bernard L. Donegan '63, Ogdensburg; Marlene Franey '62, Long Valley; Diane M. Gill '78, Branchville; Carol Hermies '81, Edison; Joyce Houser '61, Bridgewater; W. Jay Hurst '65, Basking Ridge; John James '74, Somerset; John Knorr '63, Willingboro; Wendy Koerling '82, Vineland; Paul Manko '60, Moorestown; Louis F. Maxwell '84, Evesham; Paul M. McLainko '78, Hackettstown; Donald Nieman '74, Somerset; Teresa Sandora '82, Bridgewater; Anne Y. Sarow '79, Lincoln Park; Gina Scancella '78, Cape May Point; Linda L. Schmicker '76, Island Heights; Richard C. Stout '49, Bloomfield; Nelson Swarts '63, Allendale; and Sandra Williams '66, Somerset.

In Maryland, Al Cyganowski '53 of Randallstown represented BU at a college night, while Michael Dean Adams '72 of Dover, Delaware, did a college night near his home.

Representing BU at presidential inaugurations were Patricia Washeleski '79, a member of the Alumni Board of Directors, at Villanova University; Suzanne McCabe '77, a member of the Alumni Board of Directors, at Marywood College; and Michael Dean Adams '72 at Delaware State College.

I just had to share with you this amazing story to show that BSC (and BU) alumni really do help each other out, and to publicly thank Tom for his effort and kindness. My ring is once again where it belongs — on my finger!

MERIDIAN BANK VISIT—BU students had an opportunity to visit Meridian Bancorp facilities in Reading. The visit was planned by the Husky Ambassadors and sponsored by the Alumni Association. Two alumni who work for Meridian, Cindy Hunter '77 and Brad White '86, shared their careers with the financial institution. Participating in the visit were (seated) White, Karen Butterworth, Hunter, and Dan Schumacher; (standing) Bill Serpico, Laurio Berg, Regina Grobb, Karen Pellicciotti, Tara Showers, Debbie Blair, Diana Campbell and Frank Schaeffer.

LIBERTY MUTUAL VISIT—BU students had an opportunity to visit Liberty Mutual Insurance offices in Williamsport through a program planned by the Husky Ambassadors and sponsored by the Alumni Association. Four BU alumni working at Liberty Mutual helped arrange the visit: David P. Morgovnik '77, Edna Schweitzer '78, Jim Linn '79, and Vince Corson '86. Participants included (seated) Morgovnik, Schweitzer, and Kevin Cocco; (standing) Linn, Jeff Smith, Tim Kurtz, Filmena Simoone, Nadine Dodge, Cherio Poterman, Rochele Wagner, Regina Grobb and Corson.

MINORITY CAREER DAY—Each year minority alumni are invited back to campus to share their experiences with underclassmen. George Lee (left), a non-alumnus who is a Baltimore businessman, was the principal speaker for the 1988 event. Shown with him are Wilbur Reid '87, Lavette Richardson '87, Gary Wilson '87, Joy Burgess '86, Roland Taylor '79, Joshua Leo '88, president of the Black Cultural Society; and Dr. Harry Ausprich, president of the university.

SPECIAL CALENDAR—

President Ausprich (right) accepts Sesquicentennial calendar from Roger Fromm (left), university archivist, and George Turner, a member of the history department. The two men were instrumental in compiling the photographs and historical data contained in the calendar. The commemorative calendars are available for $4.50 from the University Store.

From the University Archives

Would President Ausprich have time for this sort of thing today? In 1895, our institution was Bloomsburg State Normal School, and the eight departments included those called Physical Culture, Manual Training, and Stenography and Typewriting. The top administrator at that time, Dr. Judson P. Welsh, was called principal. On September 7, 1895 he sent the following letter to the father of a troubled "freshman":

Mr. W. C. Foresman,
Alvira, Union Co., Pa.

Dear Sir,

Your son Griffy has been very homesick. He wanted badly to go home today, but on consultation with the teachers, I learned that he is getting over it, and we thought best to hold him over till next week, as by that time we believe he will be alright. He has been too homesick to get much of a start in his studies, but we are pleased with him, and think he is going to make a good student when he gets rid of this feeling, so he can study. He is in much better spirits today, and I think if you would write him an encouraging letter, it would be better than for him to go home.

Yours truly,
J. P. Welsh

Griffy apparently did stay in school as his name appears on a list of students for the 1896-1897 school year.

A cadaver at Bloomsburg!

Down through the years students have made many requests and demands of the faculty and administrators that could be thought of as extraordinary. One such request—for a cadaver—was made by 15 biology students in the 1911-1912 school year. As was often the case in those days, the decision rested with the board of trustees; part of its minutes from a January 8, 1912, meeting follow. Dr. Waller was the principal (tantamount to our president today), and Mr. Hartline was professor of biological sciences.

"Waller said that he wished to present to the board not a request by Hartline, but an inquiry the nature of which was as follows: There were 15 medical preparatory students and they were all good students who could be trusted. Hartline wished to know if the board would consider a request to obtain a cadaver for the purpose of dissection. The cost would be $35 for the body, and transportation. Hartline said that the room in the basement of Science Hall now used for cats could also be used for this other purpose. A bond in the sum of $1,200 would be required to assure the proper and respectful disposal of the remains after the body had served the purpose of the students. This matter was discussed by the board, and it was considered not prudent."

Some languages have come and gone

Foreign languages have had their ups and downs in American academia, with respect to the notion of foreign languages in general and with certain languages in particular. Latin and Greek had their heyday and then a subsequent demise from which they have never fully recovered. French, Spanish and German have been the mainstays of the modern languages. Occasionally world political events influenced college courses.

This record has been paralleled at Bloomsburg with Latin, Greek and German being taught in the earlier years. Greek was eventually dropped with French and Spanish being added in the middle period. The 1988-1989 catalogue lists French, German, Spanish, Russian, Italian and Latin as offerings.

World War I had its effect on the teaching of foreign languages at Bloomsburg, as witnessed by the following newspaper report of June 23, 1918:

GERMAN NOT BE TAUGHT AT NORMAL IN FALL
German Teacher Had Previously Decided Never to Teach the Subject

When the fall term opens at the Bloomsburg State Normal School, German will cease to be studied by the students there.

In that connection, the German teacher at the school, Miss Morrill, a native of New England and a graduate of Holyoke, announced some months ago that she would never again teach the German language. Also with the study of German eliminated from the course, she will not be back at the school in the fall.

This strong expression against German apparently was felt for many years as the 1919-1920 college catalog omitted German and, according to catalog course listings (with the exception of the 1927-1929 school years), the teaching of German was not resumed until 1961.

BUCKS COUNTY — Attending a dinner at Fisher's Tudor House in Bensalem on November 4 were Hugh Niles '43, Harry J. Gobora '50, Connie Stanko Gobora '52, Rose Mario Grant Kautz '54, Sherrill V. Rittenmoyer '55, Barbara Szymanok Czepukaitis '65, Frank Dattilo '75, Mary Dattilo, Mark S. NEW YORK CITY — Attending an "intimate" dinner at Mrs. J's Sacred Cow Restaurant in Manhattan on October 4 were Dorothy Dorr Tilson '40, Malcolm Arter Jr. '83, Cydor Banks '75, Ron Russo '69, Sherie Pegg Gibbons '79, Lou Gibbons, Charles Umansky '74 and Doug Hippensiel '68. (Sorry, no photo.)

One in six applicants admitted

Only one in six students who applied for admission to Bloomsburg University were accepted into this year's freshman class, according to Dr. Tom Cooper, dean of enrollment management. He said 6,550 had applied for about 1,066 places in the freshman class.

Cooper said the university reached, or came close to reaching, 10 goals dealing with the mix of freshmen:

- Male to female ratio: The school had hoped for a 60 percent female to 40 percent male ratio, but figures show 61.2 percent of the freshmen are women. The College of Professional Studies, including nursing, teacher education, allied health and interpretation for hearing impaired, is 83 percent female. The other two colleges, business and arts and sciences, have more male than female freshmen.

- Minority students: The goal for in-state black freshmen was set at 3.4 percent of the freshmen population, and 4.12 were enrolled on the first day.

- Hispanic: The goal was .90 percent, while .81 percent enrolled.

- College of Arts and Sciences: Goal of 460; 481 enrolled.
- College of Business: Goal of 256; 248 enrolled.
- Education: Goal of 160; 187 enrolled.
- Nursing: Goal of 60; 66 enrolled.
- Allied health sciences: Goal of 60; 57 enrolled.
- Computer science: Goal of 35; 35 enrolled.
- Business education: Goal of 25; 31 enrolled.
- Interpreting for hearing impaired: Goal of four; two enrolled.

WILKES-BARRE — Attending the alumni dinner at the Sheraton Crossgates on November 17 were Jane Elmos-Crahall '72 (alumni board member), Brinley Crahall '71, Suzanne Cromack McCabe '77 (alumni board member), Mr. and Mrs. Bill Kelly '71, Mary Agnes Phillips Kralz '77, Mabel A. Linskell '28, Nancy Swartz Lychos '52, John Lychos, Phyllis Mundy '70, Marie Pendleton '40, Scott Potzman '73, Marilyn Ritter Rozollo '57, Dr. Ralph Rozollo, Wanda Willis '88, Mary Wizda '76. Representing BU were Dr. John J. Trathen '68, director of student activities and the Kehr Union (and alumni board treasurer); Husky Ambassadors Cindy Hurst and Jeff Smith, and Doug Hippensiel '68, director of alumni affairs.

Chinese educators visit BU

Three educators from Shenyang Teachers College in the Republic of China visited Bloomsburg University on the weekend of October 29-30. The trio included Leng Bing, president of Shenyang Teachers College; Shen Kuoguan, director of foreign affairs; and Yao Engui, lecturer and interpreter.

The visit is a result of an educational contractual agreement of the USA/China Consortium, of which BU is a member, according to Dr. Howard Macauley, dean of BU's College of Professional Studies. Macauley was the university's representative in the initial trip to China in the summer of 1987.

Macauley noted that Jin Minghai, a lecturer in the physics department at Shenyang Teachers College, is enrolled as a graduate student in BU's instructional technology program.

Enrollment targets endorsed for spring and next year

Enough students will be enrolled for the spring semester to bring the summer 1988 and academic year 1988-1989 full time equivalent enrollment equal to the FTE for summer 1987 and academic year 1987-1988. That's the goal of Dr. Tom Cooper, dean of student enrollment, which was endorsed at a recent meeting of the University's Planning and Budget Committee.

The official overall enrollment of 6,757 students, a decrease of 179 students from a year ago, equals a decline in non-degree and graduate enrollments of 75 and 84 students respectively, and caused the head-count enrollment to decline from 6,936 to 6,804, according to Cooper.

As a result of BU's decrease and a system-wide increase of approximately 2,500 students, Bloomsburg has dropped from third in size among the State System of Higher Education institutions to seventh, Cooper said.

Jim Lauffer, budget subcommittee chair, reported the committee met and reviewed information on student numbers and what the overall budget implications are.

Brian Johnson, co-chair of the planning and budget committee, said the budget implications of enrollment are significant, and Cooper discussed these items in his report on the recommended enrollment goals.

Girton joins Foundation leadership

J. Jan Girton of the Columbia County Farmers National Bank has been appointed to fill a vacancy on the executive committee of the BU Foundation Board of Directors, according to Jane Gitler, board president. Girton fills a vacancy created by the retirement of Richard A. Benefield.

Girton has been a member of the Foundation Board since the board's reactivation in January 1986.

Sports wrap-up

PC champion and national tournament participant Lock Haven.

Goalie Keith Cincotta anchored the defense allowing 1.6 goals per game and making 94 saves while shutting out five opponents. All-conference midfielder Jerry Crick led a group of defenders in front of Cincotta and added two goals and an assist to the offensive attack. Jack Milligan was the offensive leader with almost half of the team's goals as the junior scored nine times during the season.

THE WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY team continued its impressive performances in one of the country's strongest regions as the Huskies finished fourth in the PC championships and had two runners earn all-conference recognition. Senior Brenda Bisset finished among the leaders to be named to the All-PC team for the third consecutive year, while Laurie Alexander earned the honor for the second year in a row.

Bisset placed sixth, individually, in a time of 19:27, and Alexander was 14th in 19:50. As a team, the Huskies placed behind three nationally rated teams: Edinboro, Indiana (Pa.), and Millersville.

ONE OF THE BIGGEST improvements of the fall teams was made by the men's cross country program. Although the Huskies finished only ninth in the PC championships, it was the squad's highest placing since the 1978-79 campaign. A young group, which made constant progression as the season moved along, turned in its best times at the conference meet. Craig Koch was the top individual, finishing in the 37th position in a time of 28:38, but was joined by all of the Huskies' other runners with a fine grouping which saw just a 1:04 difference between Koch and the club's seventh and final finisher. The team also had a 3-0 dual-meet record.

A SIXTH-PLACE FINISH in the PC championships capped the season for the women's tennis team. The Huskies had two individual semi-finalists at the conference tournament, including Cathy Von Luehrte at number two singles and Chris Labosky in the third flight. A 7-10 dual match record included four wins over conference opposition.

(Editor's Note: The following article was written by Mike Reuther, a staff writer for The Danville News.)

A Bloomsburg University professor weaves some magic, plays games and uses a little common sense and even old-fashioned book work to help conquer the mental blocks elementary school students often have with mathematics.

Anything from playing popular logic games such as Yatzee to pulling rabbits out of a hat are used by Richard Donald to teach the students who come to his five-week course called "Mathaphobia," held each Thursday evening at the university.

About 250 students enroll for the popular classes in which they apply fun methods to tackle mathematics problems during the one hour they spend there every week.

"We're working on attitudes," Donald said. "The math will fall into place once we help their attitudes."

Keeping in mind that all students are different in developing their attitudes is what mathaphobia is all about, he said.

That's why Donald's college students — about 130 in all — are used to teach the children. This allows the children to be divided into pairs to receive that all-important one-on-one personal attention, matching them up with those instructors best suited for their individual problems.

Donald's teachers include college students who are majoring in elementary education, early childhood and special education, which gives them the background to meet almost any of the children's needs.

"Some of these kids come to be enriched. They love mathematics. They are the biggest challenges to my people," he said. "But most are here for remedial work."

On the first night of class, each student takes a diagnostic test to find in what math area he or she might need help. In addition, informal personal interviews are held with each student.

Donald said once a pair of children becomes matched with a teacher, he likes to keep them with that same teacher.

"They become so super-attached after that first week that you wouldn't dare change them," he said. "Once we have that attachment we build on that."

With 250 students to teach, each different in ability, attitude and need, Donald has little choice but to hold the program on three different floors of the university's McCormick Human Services Center. Students and teachers are in the hallways and some of the rooms — wherever they find a spot to sit and learn. During the sessions, Donald's role consists of moving among the three floors and making suggestions and monitoring.

While it all seems a bit unorthodox, even chaotic, Donald said it seems to work, partly because it relies on teaching models to get across points to students.

"Teaching is selling," said Donald, who is not above donning a cape and hat to pull rabbits out of hats to get across some mathematical concept.

Donald's teachers might teach addition or subtraction with cards and dice, magical tricks or bowling score sheets; multiplication or division with puppets; and fractions or calendar reading with colorful bulletin boards.

"No one on earth can tell you what will work with a child," he said. "You cannot guarantee anything. What you might not like, another kid down the hall is going to love."

Many of the teaching models are Donald's own creation, he said. However, he also attends annual mathematics teacher conventions where he picks up many of his ideas. "I like it because it's a sharing thing. People can come to my workshop and I can go to theirs."

Donald estimated that teaching models are employed about 60 percent of the class time, but he admits that they have limitations.

Former professor dies

East Stroudsburg professor John (Jack) Jones died August 9 at age 46. He was a member of the faculty at BU from 1965-1967, serving as assistant dean of men and tennis coach.

At the time of his death, he was a professor in the department of recreation and leisure at ESU.

Dixon re-elected SSHE chair

F. Eugene Dixon Jr. of Lafayette Hill was re-elected for a sixth term as chair of the board of governors for the State System of Higher Education, of which BU is a part.

"The launching pads should be the textbooks. But don't become a slave to it," he explained, adding that he also tries to stay away from giving students homework.

Not only does that keep from interfering with students' regular school work, he said, but it stays in tune with establishing good attitudes.

He explained that quite often students are poor in math only because of some kind of mental block that prevents them from believing they can solve the problems.

Sometimes it can be something as simple as where a student sits in an elementary classroom or the temperature of the classroom, according to Donald.

The point is, he explains, that "everyone is different."

"We can't do a lot with mathematics (ability), but we can convince them that they can," he said.

Part of building a healthy attitude concerns the parents of children, who Donald welcomes to stay in the building as the sessions are going on. "It's very important that a parent brings them."

He refers to the all-important parent relationship as one of three components that make up the triad — the other components being the teacher and the student.

Students also get a chance to work with the computers in the building, something which can provide both fun and a feeling of importance, especially when the students see their work come out on the printer, he said.

All the teachers of the program, including Donald, are volunteers. But despite the demands it makes upon him, Donald has kept at Mathaphobia for a dozen years and has seen between 5,000 and 6,000 students go through the program.

Now that's some arithmetic.

WORKING WONDERS — Richard Donald, a member of the BU math department who founded the popular "Mathaphobia" program, thrills his way through some of the 250 students who dressed up for their weekly session during the Halloween season.

From the dean's list

(Editor's Note: The following column was written by Dr. John Baird, a former professor of psychology, now in his third year as dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.)

Alumni may not recall that the College of Arts and Sciences is the largest in terms of the number of faculty members at the university. Currently we have 220 faculty members across 18 separate departments which are organized in three large areas

Arts/Humanities, the Social Sciences and Natural Sciences/Mathematics. Dr. Roosevelt Newsom, a former chair of the joint department at Wilkes College, is the associate dean of the college.

With over 2,000 students majoring in arts and sciences and with responsibility for the general education program, our office is a busy and exciting one. Within each of the three areas I will mention one department project that should be of interest to alumni and friends.

BAIRD

NO DOUBT, the most exciting project in arts and humanities is the renovation of Old Science Hall currently underway. The departments of music, art, history, anthropology and languages and cultures will be located in this building.

Some of you may remember when the psychology department was located on two or three floors in Old Science and how those old wooden floors would creak between classes. All that will be "Old Science" now as the building receives a three million dollar renovation.

The music department will have a choral rehearsal area and about eight new pianos. The languages department will have its own languages lab, anthropology will have office and laboratory space, and the history department will be in a totally renovated area.

Another exciting concept in Old Science will be the mixture of art studios and classrooms. Crafts, painting, sculpture and ceramics will complement a totally equipped photography studio. We have recently hired Dr. Vera Viditz Ward as a new faculty member in the art department with a specialty in photography. We are looking forward to photography as an important new area within arts and sciences.

THE SOCIAL SCIENCES news is creation of an anthropology department. In the fall of 1987 we added a fourth faculty member to this group, and at the present time we are planning to create its own department. Faculty members include Dave Munderhout, Tim Aleo, Bob Reeder and a new faculty member to replace Elise Brenner, who resigned to take a position in New England. Our anthropology department has recently completed some archaeological digs in the local area. The BU field school excavated areas around Fort McClary and the Susquehanna River this past summer. Findings included Indian artifacts and revolutionary pottery.

PROGRESS in natural sciences and math includes two new areas of study. Health/physics is the newest addition to our physics department, and we have hired an exciting faculty member from Princeton University. Dr. Jack Couch will be designing a new health/physics laboratory, and we are developing a curriculum that will prepare students for careers in nuclear medicine, dosimetry and other areas of health physics.

A second program has been defined in remote sensing as a part of the geography/earth science department. Remote sensing is an area concerned with satellite detection on earth and space phenomena. The university hired Dr. Nicholas Short from NASA in Washington, D.C., and we are excited about the possibilities that remote sensing provides. It is a good combination of geography and earth science and like many other scientific fields has been computerized heavily in recent years.

SEVERAL FACULTY in arts and sciences have utilized grants from the Deans' Fund for Academic Excellence made available through your Alumni Association. We are appreciative of your continued support, and we want you to know that your contributions to the university are used to further the scholarly excellence which characterize our fine faculty. Best wishes to each of you.

THE WINNER — Marc H. Edelstein '78 of Havertown, Pa., was the winner of a $100 gift certificate for the University Store. His name was drawn at the Homecoming Dinner Dance from the names of all those alumni who registered during the day. Presenting the gift certificate was Mary Anne Kiemkosky '59, president of the Alumni Association.

MARY CONTINI WELSKO '25 of Freeland died October 2. A retired teacher, she taught English and history for 27 years in the former Foster Township School District, and for 21 years in the Hazleton Area School District.

She was the widow of Thomas E. Welsko. Surviving are a son, Thomas E. Jr.; four sisters, two grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

MARY DODSON GEARHART '26, an education pioneer who started the first special education class in Monroe County, was honored recently at a surprise testimonial dinner at Pocono Manor Resort and Conference Center. An educator for over 60 years, Mrs. Gearhart started her teaching career at Cambria Elementary School. From 1942 to 1944, she taught at the Cherry Valley Elementary School and later for 10 years at the Clearview School in Stroudsburg. It was there that she created the first special education class in Monroe County.

"Mary was really several decades ahead of the state in curriculum development," said Ralph Knauf, former Clearview principal. "She was mainstreaming and integrating her students ... long before we knew what the word meant."

From 1956 to 1970, Mrs. Gearhart taught at the Morey Elementary School in Stroudsburg.

She earned a master's degree in psychology at Duquesne University.

HELEN GUSTASON '26 died June 26 at age 82. A mathematics teacher at East Pittsburgh High School for 33 years, she also attended Penn State University and earned a master's degree at the University of Pittsburgh.

She was a world traveler, visiting Europe nine times as well as all 50 states. She once traveled to England with a group from Bloomsburg.

She was the mother of three educators: Florence Walter, a retired elementary teacher in Vienna, Va.; Marjorie Berringer, an elementary teacher at Norwin School System; and Millie Bollinger, a secondary teacher at Woodland Hills School District.

WILLIAM C. SHERIDAN '58 has been elected president of the American Association of School Personnel Administrators during its 50th anniversary conference held in Valley Forge, Pa.

He has served for the past 23 years as director of personnel for the public schools of Brookline, Mass. A native of Kennett Square, he earned a M.A. degree in history at Seton Hall University.

In his acceptance speech, Mr. Sheridan cited that today's first graders are the graduating class of the year 2000. He addressed the changing nature of students attending the public schools throughout the United States, noting one of every five has been identified as having a special need, the increasing number of students from single parent homes, the vast numbers of "latch key children," the marked increase in minority students, and the large number of students for whom English is a second language.

He said these needs require that educators for the 21st century (1) must be able to work with and raise the achievement and self esteem of minority students; (2) must be computer acquainted, if not computer literate; (3) must be better prepared and qualified in science and mathematics; (4) must be prepared to work with children coming from single parent families or homes where both parents are employed; (5) must be imbued with a spirit and dedication to social service; and (6) must be capable of working with children with special needs.

Mr. Sheridan is married to the former MARY JOYCE LAURO '61.

The English version, which contains 320 pages, has been lauded as an authoritative reference work for behavioral science usage. He also published an earlier 668 page volume, Abuse of Women: Legislation, Reporting and Prevention.

Costa, who is principal of Shenandoah Valley Junior Senior High School, earned a master's degree at Villanova University and a Ph.D. degree at Columbia Pacific University.

JIM GALLAGHER '64 was featured in an article in the November issue of American Teacher, the official publication of the American Federation of Teachers AFL/CIO:

Jim Gallagher is legally blind, but that doesn't mean he lacks vision.

Gallagher, a member of the AFT-affiliated Philadelphia Federation of Teachers and a junior high school science teacher currently working at the Franklin Institute, remembers several years ago how one wheelchair-bound kindergarten teacher visited his work site on a field trip and had a terrible time getting around.

"I thought to myself, 'There are lots of programs if you're unemployed but not so much to keep you employed if you have special needs. Why hasn't someone organized these professionals?'"

So he did.

Today, Gallagher is the driving force behind Teachers With Special Needs. This PFT-supported advocacy group serves union members who have vision or hearing impairments, diabetes, Muscular Dystrophy, multiple sclerosis or other physical disabilities.

The one-year-old group takes care of its own by lobbying at the local level for such improvements as clearly marked handicapped parking, accessible buildings and public transportation and teacher aides for physically challenged teachers. It is based on the belief that collective action — the same mechanism that historically has helped all union members — can be used to help disabled teachers in particular.

"If you are just one person in need, people tend to ignore you," Gallagher explains. "If you have 100 people with [similar] needs, then people will listen to you."

Now the Philadelphia teacher would like to take the advocacy group to the national level.

MARGARET (PEGGY) BURNS '67, a teacher at Council Rock School District, was one of ten teachers recognized as a good teacher in an article which appeared in the September 4 issue of the Bucks County Courier Times. The teachers were singled out because they "are considered good by their students, supervisors and colleagues. Each has qualities that have made an impact on his or her students."

The article continues:

"She doesn't have all the gingerbread, but it's because she's devoted herself to the kids." That's how Assistant Superintendent David Blatt introduces high school English teacher Margaret Burns.

From the front office to the secretary's desk, the staff at Council Rock High School seem to take a protective pride in Burns. They sing her praises because they realize she never will.

"Believe me, there are many better teachers," said Burns, who has taught at Council Rock for 21 years. "I try to be dedicated, to set an air of professional commitment to the students."

Burns is the first to admit she's not flashy.

"I guess I would describe myself as traditional. I enjoy the classics," she said, ticking off those old favorites of junior American lit: The Grapes of Wrath, The Scarlet Letter and Death of a Salesman.

"I guess I wouldn't describe myself as flashy. I take my work seriously. I try to make my students take it seriously."

She likes teaching juniors, she said.

"I usually teach advanced students, and they're all very motivated. I enjoy the age group. They don't have the wise attitude of seniors. They work until the end of the year."

Burns admits she has thought about going on to teach college, but concludes, "I'm really content where I am. This is the only place I've taught. I feel it's a very good school."

Bums shows the same loyalty to her alma mater, Bloomsburg, where she received her bachelor's and master's degrees. Her only professional activity outside the classroom is as secretary of the school's alumni board of directors.

"I don't think you could find an administration more dedicated than Council Rock's," she said. "The faculty is the same way, and the community sets high standards that lend to a supportive atmosphere."

PATRICK LYNCH '68, a world cultures teacher at North Allegheny Intermediate High School, Pittsburgh, spent six weeks in Nigeria this past summer. He was one of 15 teachers in southwestern Pennsylvania to be selected by Indiana University of Pennsylvania to participate in a Fulbright-Hayes study program in Nigeria.

"Our purpose," said Lynch, "was to study the Nigerian people and their culture and to develop a curriculum which would present a realistic view of Nigeria as a representative Third World nation."

"We visited colleges, museums, shrines, markets, craft centers and people's homes. Lagos, Kano, Benin, Sokoto and Calabar are some of the cities I visited," he said. Highpoints of the trip included a village masquerade performance and another visit when he found himself in the midst of nearly one million Moslems during their prayers.

Lynch says he found the people to be very friendly and helpful. Despite the overall poverty, he soon realized they are generally optimistic about the country's future. He believes Nigeria is perhaps the most important African nation today, noting that one of every five black Africans is a Nigerian.

Nigeria is also a member of OPEC, but presently has economical problems because of low petroleum prices. Because of its population and its unusual economic power, Nigeria has been a leader in African politics."

At North Allegheny Intermediate, Lynch plans to use his slides of Nigeria and his experiences to make his classes more interesting. While in Nigeria, he established pen pal agreements with three Nigerian schools, hoping this will be an enjoyable and informal way for teenagers to learn about each other.

THOMAS DELANEY '85, a teacher at Harry S. Truman High School in Bristol Township, is one of ten teachers recognized in an article in the September 4 issue of the Bucks County Courier Times as a "good" teacher. The article noted that the ten "are considered good by their students, supervisors and colleagues. Each has qualities that have made an impact on his or her school and students."

The article continues:

As a special education teacher at Harry S Truman High School, Tom Delaney works to eliminate some of the prejudices associated with mentally retarded students.

At the same time, he tries to help them realize that their lifestyle after graduation does not have to be different from that of others.

"I'm trying to get more of the kids out into the community, instead of a shelter workshop," Delaney said. "They can be part of the community."

To get this message across, Delaney gets his students involved in activities outside the classroom. One class activity involves the students taking a bus with a teacher's assistant to a local supermarket for a lesson on traveling and shopping.

Delaney's students also participate in an annual camping trip with other high school students. He said the outing enables the students to associate with others in a typical environment.

"More people see my students and are not afraid of them," he said.

Delaney, 27, majored in special education at Bloomsburg University. He worked for ten years at Rivercrest Center, a group home for the mentally retarded in Collegeville.

A teacher in Bristol Township for three years, Delaney said he enjoys being involved with students and helping them realize their capabilities.

"I like seeing people improve, change and grow up. I wanted to teach younger students to make them as independent as possible."

'Unclassified' Notes

1932

A. LUCILE McHOSE ECKER '32 and her husband, Attorney Bartel E. Ecker, observed their 54th wedding anniversary in September. Mrs. Ecker is a retired teacher from the Hazleton Area School District. She has served a four-term deacon at First Presbyterian Church in Hazleton and is a former board member and treasurer of the Hazleton State Hospital Auxiliary. She also assisted with the "Meals on Wheels" program.

She and her husband are the parents of a son, Attorney Bart E. Ecker. They have two grandchildren, Michelle and Bart IV.

LOUISE SEAMAN THOMAS '42 of Hamburg died November 30 in a traffic accident on Rt. 61 just north of Deer Lake. A beautiful memorial service was held on Sunday, December 4.

A native of Hamburg, she taught at the high school in that community for two years after graduation. She was a partner with her husband, JOHN W. THOMAS '47, in a real estate business and insurance agency they operated from their home for 31 years. She retired on January 1, 1985.

Louise is also survived by two daughters, Susan and Jane, and a brother, Irvin R. Seaman.

THOMAS F. CASTRILLI '69 of Wayne, Pa., has been appointed vice president, control states sales, for Heublein Wines Division. He is responsible for the sale of Heublein wines in 18 states and one county government within the control state system.

He joined Heublein from Vintners International where he was formerly control states division manager. An experienced beverage executive, he spent several years at the Wine Spectrum, first as district manager and then as control states sales supervisor. He joined the Seagram Wine Company as group division manager, control states.

CASTRILLI '69

STAFF MEMBER HONORED — If you've had occasion to call or visit the Fenstemaker Alumni House, chances are good that you spoke with a veteran staff person known for her friendly personality and helpfulness: Linda Long. Since joining the university family just out of high school in 1968, Linda has been responsible for maintaining alumni records. During those years, she has seen the index card files and metal address plates replaced by main frame data base and desktop computers. Shown with Linda at a luncheon in honor of her 20th anniversary are John L. Walker (left), vice president for institutional advancement, and Dr. C. Stuart Edwards '41, member and past president of the BU Alumni Board of Directors.

Band alumni not deterred by rain

The rainy cold weather did not dampen the spirits of the band alumni who returned for this year's Homecoming. The 35 alumni musicians marching in the parade was the best turnout in the past five years. Other events during the day included an appearance on the field at half-time of the football game and a picnic-style buffet after the game. That evening the alumni joined student band members for a Halloween party at the Bloomsburg American Legion, which was attended by about 100.

Those in attendance during the day were Steve Galbreth '68, Laurel Parfitt '87, Dr. Steve Wallace, former director of bands; Ted Irwin '70, Pat Rogers '71, Evelyn Owens '78, Sue Leighow '76, Frank Magel '86, Dee Dee Waddell '88, Roxanne Dennis '81, Sue Staff '79, Linda Schnucker '76, Jack Davenport '72, Sue Davenport '75, Clarann Schultz '88, Cindy Hepler '86, Angela Hill '88, Bob Twadell '78, Cindy Herzog '83, Curtis Shipe '83, Lois Rabenold '80, Neil Gray '72, Terry Guers '77, Heidi Buck '87, Tara Yost '87, Maggie Knoebel '72, Greg Butler '75, Robert Schwanger '76, George Kissinger '76, Sally Williams '81, Bonnie Prego '88, Claudia Whittaker '78, Doug Post '79, Richard Schwanger '73, Becky Seidel '81 and Larry Nester '77.

Homecoming will be on October 28 in 1989. Since next year will be the 150th anniversary of the university, please make a special effort to be part of the celebration. Band alumni are also reminded that the summer picnic will be held on June 10, 1989, near Quakertown.

Hear Ye! Hear Ye!

The year nineteen hundred eighty-nine marks the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Bloomsburg University!

On this auspicious occasion, you are cordially invited to join with members of the university community in a year-long series of events planned to honour our heritage and herald the future of one of Pennsylvania's finest institutions of higher learning.

"A Legacy of Learning," the theme chosen for our celebration, is intended to acknowledge both the legacy entrusted to us by those men and women who preceded us and our responsibility to those who will follow.

As we join together in celebration, our eyes and our hearts will look back and remember. We will tell of things past and appreciate what was, but we will also keep our vision fixed firmly on the future — a future that holds promise beyond our most optimistic imaginings.

Come then, join with us in our celebration, from the symbolic tolling of the Carver Tower Bell on January 1, 1989, through the many events planned for you by the university community. — The Sesquicentennial Planning Committee

SMS VISIT — BU students had the opportunity to visit Shared Medical Systems, a firm in Malvern which employs a large number of BU graduates. The visit was arranged by the Husky Ambassadors and sponsored by the Alumni Association. Two BU alumni employed by SMS — Rick Pottino '85 and Jill Stollo '78 — were instrumental in hosting the visit. (Stollo has since left SMS to accept another position.)
